11,000 Installers Set to Quit Today, Jumping the Gun On 195,000 Others

New York (Monday) April 24 (U.P.).—Western Electric Co. telephone equipment installers across the Nation prepared to strike today as negotiations between company and union officials were broken off.

The strike deadline set by the 11,000 installers, members of Division 6 of the Communication Workers of America (CWA), was 6 a. m. (local time), only 42 hours before 195,000 other CWA telephone workers were scheduled to walk out in a Nation-wide strike.

Federal Mediator Thomas Stuebel met with negotiators in a joint company-union meeting last night and early today in a "last-ditch" effort to avert the strike.

The strike deadline was set for installers in 43 States after the union charged that employees working on a radio tower near South Bend, Ind., were "locked out." The company said the dispute grew from the refusal of six union members to walk half a mile through a muddy field to reach the tower.

While the installers' dispute temporarily dominated the telephone strike picture as a whole, it appeared that little progress was being made in 24 other separate negotiations to prevent a mass telephone strike at Tuesday midnight.

300 Ready to Quit Here, Set Up Picket Lines

In the Washington area, some 300 equipment installers were ready to walk out at 6 a. m. and to set up picket lines, if deemed necessary, according to Harry M. Lentz, steward of Washington Local 96 of Division 6.

The Division 6 Western Electric Co. employees work chiefly in the central offices of the telephone company and 12 or 13 of these offices would be picketed if it is given the word to do so, Lentz said.

Lentz added he expected help from other CIO unions if picket lines are established.

The Washington local voted about 4 to 1 in favor of striking for wage demands, he said. The two union divisions representing local telephone operators and plant workers continued negotiations with local telephone company officials yesterday in separate morning sessions. Both groups, Divisions 30 and 36, again offered to arbitrate their wage disputes with the company, which again refused.

Mrs. Eleanor J. Palmer, president of Division 50, representing some 2500 operators, and Glenn E. Watts, president of Division 36, with about 3500 plant operators, said the "Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co." obviously does not see PHONE, Page 2, Column 3.

Cleric Declines Bishop's Office as Ceremony Begins

Vienna, Sept. 23 (U.P.).—Msgr. Franz Jachym created a sensation today when he refused in front of the altar of Vienna's famous St. Stephen's Church to be ordained as a Roman Catholic bishop.

Already dressed in a bishop's robe, Msgr. Jachym abruptly declined to take the oath before a distinguished assemblage of several thousand that had gathered for the ceremony.

He told Theodor Cardinal Innitzer, first in Latin and then in German, that he felt himself "unworthy" of the office. Without further explanation he left the church. He entered a car outside the cathedral and went to his home where he remained inaccessible for further comment.

Suspect and Pal Nabbed in Flight 'Tex' Baker, Ex-Grill Owner, Charged in $12 Safe-Cracking

RICHARD R. (TEX) BAKER

HAMPTON R. LACKEY

... Ex-convicts arrested on housebreaking charges

Richard R. (Tex) Baker, 47, who catered to the appetites of the District's stay-up-lates in his better days, was arrested yesterday as a suspect in a safe-cracking job.

Picked up with Baker was Hampton R. Lackey, 33, of 419 Massachusetts ave., n.w. Baker is awaiting trial for arson in connection with a $5000 fire at his former restaurant, Tex's Grill, at 1361 H st. n.e.

Ironically, the man whose restaurant business grossed an estimated $100,000 a year during the war was charged with a safe robbery that yielded only 12 dollars in coins.

Baker, who lives at 935 Massachusetts ave., n.w., and Lackey, both former convicts, were charged with housebreaking and will appear in Municipal Court today.

Shortly after 11 a. m. yesterday Police Pts. Jack L. Acree and B. A. Mattingly of First Precinct were cruising in a scout car on 5th st. n.w. between 1 and K sts. n.w. The men ran toward 1 st. The policemen, headed in the opposite direction, continued to 5th and K sts., intending to make a "U" turn and take after the men.

At 5th and K sts., they were stopped by Leo Bechtold, an employee of the Albert M. Briggs meat market, 506 K st. n.w. "I just saw two men run out of the basement door of our market," he told police, "and I heard some noises that sounded like thumps in one of the other stores."

A group of stores in the 500 block of K st. n.w., share a common basement.

The policemen picked up Baker at 8th st. and Massachusetts ave. See SAFE, Page 16, Column 7.

U. S. Considers Coy to Outline Action to Delay Rail Walkout

Any Government Step Must Be Taken by Tonight, Union Hints

By The Associated Press

Possibility of Government action to ward off a threatened strike of firemen and engineers on four major railroads increased yesterday.

Government officials here admitted they were considering steps which might stay the walkout of firemen and engineers on four major railroads slated for Wednesday.

The roads are the Pennsylvania, New York Central, Southern, and the Atchafalaya, Topeka and Santa Fe. One possible move by the Government would be to ask the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers to postpone its strike while another effort was made to mediate. The carriers already have refused arbitration on the issue.

Most rail labor experts also believe the union similarly would decline arbitration now because of the refusal of the two previous Presidential fact-finding boards to grant the union's request for a third man on multiple diesel locomotives.

The union has indicated that if the Government is to take any action to avert the walkout, it must do so by tonight.

Strike Call Seen as Fight Against the Diesel Era

By Sam Stavisky

Post Reporter

The scheduled strike of the locomotive firemen, due Wednesday, has been in the making 14 years. It will not be a walkout over a clear-cut issue, like wages or hours, but rather it will be a deep-rooted protest against a revolution—"The Diesel Revolution"—which began in the mid-thirties and is still under way.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers have for the past decade and a half watched with anxiety the dieselization of the railroad industry, with increasingly bigger diesel engines providing faster, cheaper power than the standard steam locomotive.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers has similarly been concerned with the diesel train. Both brotherhoods have been seeking for many years to augment the traditional two-man engineer.

Aid for Critical Areas

School Districts' Financial Woes to Be Discussed Here

Nearly 1000 representatives of school districts in various parts of the country will meet here Tuesday night to discuss relief for their school financial troubles.

They are expected to endorse a House bill which would establish Federal responsibility for aiding schools in areas where military or Government installations, though untaxed, have overburdened the school systems.

Between 700 and 800 delegates are expected from the area surrounding Washington, and a number of Senators and Representatives have also indicated they would attend.

The meeting, called for 8 p. m. Tuesday at Western High School, is

FCC Chief to Address Senate Group Today; Opposes 'Police' Role

By Chalmers M. Roberts

Post Reporter

Federal Communications Commission Chairman Wayne Coy today told a Senate subcommittee today how FCC would attack the use of wires, phones and radio for transmitting gambling information throughout the Nation to race-horse bookmakers.

FCC is known to disagree with Attorney General J. Howard McGrath's proposal that the communications commission should police Western Union, the phone company and radio and television stations.

FCC wants a bill with criminal penalties for those who would use the various communications facilities to transmit gambling data, a proposal rejected (at the Justice Department's advice) by the crime conference that met here in February.

McGrath said last week, however, that he had not closed his mind against criminal sanctions. He said that he would approve them if it were demonstrated they could be effective.

Iturbi Unhurt As Plane Lands In Maryland Field

Wye Mills, Md., April 23 (U.P.).—A private plane carrying Pianist Jose Iturbi to a concert engagement in Baltimore got lost, ran out of gas, and made an emergency landing in a corn field near this Eastern Shore town today.

No one was injured. Aboard with Iturbi were his sisters, Madame Amparo Iturbi; his secretary, Marian Seabury; and the pilot, whose name was not immediately learned.

Iturbi and his party resumed their trip from Rochester, N. Y., to Baltimore by car. The afternoon concert scheduled at the Lyric Theater was postponed until Tuesday.

Miss Seabury telephoned word of the mishap from a gasoline station to Patrick Hayes, the pianist's Washington concert manager, who was waiting for Iturbi at the Lyric. Iturbi will play Monday at Constitution Hall in Washington.

All Hainan Is Ordered Evacuated

Chiang Hands Over To Reds Half of What Remains of Nationalist China

By Stanley Rich

Yulin, Hainan Island (Monday), April 24 (U.P.).—Chiang Kai-shek today handed over half of what remains of Nationalist China to the Communists. He ordered total evacuation of this invaded island.

One Navy landing craft from Formosa and three commercial vessels are standing by in this port on the south coast to carry out top civilian and military officials.

Five Nationalist armies, totaling 125,000 men, are to be left to the hands of the approaching Reds unless some way can be devised at this late hour to evacuate them also.

The evacuation of top officials is expected to begin Tuesday and it is estimated the Chinese Communists will control all of this island of 13,500 square miles in from four days to a week.

To Get Rich Resources With it will go a rich repository of natural resources. Hainan holds an estimated 3,500,000 tons of iron ore and valuable coal and petroleum deposits.

The Nationalist military and civil leaders left Hainan, capital city on the north coast. At that time the Reds were only three miles away.

The new defense headquarters was set up here on the south coast, ostensibly to fight back at the Communist invasion force estimated at 10,000 to 15,000 troops.

This is the force that swarmed ashore in the big invasion operation started Monday by the Reds from South China's Luichow Peninsula across the 10-mile-wide Hainan Strait.

In addition, the Reds have five guerrilla divisions estimated at 60,000 men waiting to help take over the island. Most of these guerrillas are in the Five Finger Mountains some 25 miles north of Yulin.

To Sweep Down on Airfield They already are poised to sweep down on Samah Airfield some 15 miles to the west. The Nationalists moved their air operations to this base when they pulled out of Hoihow.

The order to give up this island reached Yulin this morning. I have this on the authority of a general in the services of the Nationalist army. His name cannot be disclosed.

He said Chiang refused to send reinforcements because he feared the growing strength and popularity of two of Hainan's defenders—Gen. Hsueh Yueh, the military commander-in-chief, and Marshal Chen Chi-Tang, Hainan's governor.

The general asserted Hainan still could be held if the Nationalists had "only one more army" at their disposal. He said a request for the 50th Nationalist army from Formosa had been refused. This request was made Friday when the Red threat to Hoihow developed suddenly.

The fleet of Adm. Kwei Ying-chin, commander in chief of the Nationalist navy, is still outside Hoihow harbor. He radioed Yulin this morning he was ready to help in the coming evacuation.

Some 300 navy personnel already in Yulin are packed and ready to leave aboard landing craft sent from Formosa for this purpose.

In Secret Proposal Britain Asks Aid From U. S. To Gain 'Sterling Balances'

By Alfred Friendly

Post Reporter

The British government last week submitted to the State Department its first concrete proposal for American aid in relieving the so-called "sterling balances" problem.

The British paper is highly secret and its circulation has been strictly limited. It was delivered in fulfillment of an agreement made last September in the British-Canadian-U. S. monetary talks.

At that time it was decided that further exploration should be made of this most difficult obstacle in the way of a stable and freely convertible pound.

Although the United Kingdom proposal presents a concrete plan, in which the U. S. would help pay off some of the war-incurred debt of Britain to Commonwealth countries, it appears that it was submitted without any real intention that it was to form the basis for any immediate action.

Instead, it serves the purpose of illustrating the connection of Britain's debt, particularly to India and Pakistan, with the whole problem of the need for economic aid to Southeast Asia.

The sterling balances are credits in British pounds held principally by British colonies, Egypt and members of the Commonwealth. In total, they amount to between four and five billion dollars.

Their liquidation constitutes a heavy, and inflationary, drain on Great Britain, and their mere existence makes it almost impossible for Britain to permit the pound to become convertible for dollars.

Under the proposal submitted last week by British economic officials here, the United States would give direct dollar aid—the amount was not suggested in the paper—principally to India and Pakistan. In return, those countries would cancel a like amount of the British pound debt to them.

This would amount, bluntly, to the United States paying off part of a British debt for the purpose of rendering the pound a more stable currency.

In submitting the proposal, it is believed, the British were perfectly

Soviet Zone Clergy Hits Communism

Catholic, Protestant Pastors Unite in Berlin Denunciation

Berlin, April 23 (U.P.).—Protestant and Catholic ministers in the Soviet zone of Germany united today in the most vigorous, outspoken attack on Russian communism since the Red-controlled state was organized less than a year ago.

Roman Catholic priests read a pastoral letter to congregations warning that those who supported "materialist world philosophy" would be excluded from church sacraments—and if they persisted—would be excommunicated.

East Germany's Evangelical clergymen protested from their pulpits against the Soviet puppet state forcing Germans to accept communism as the "only valid truth."

Evangelical Bishop Otto Dibelius of Berlin underlined the concerted attack at a meeting of top Protestants later in the day by stating that the church will not be used for political aims, "either in East or West Germany."

The Protestant Evangelical message, issued by the church's Russian zone council, charged that religion is being stifled in schools and community life.

"No state power has the right to enforce a conception which contradicts beliefs and conscience," the Protestants declared.

The Catholic pastoral letter, issued March 1, denounced "materialism" without mentioning communism by name, but left no doubt it referred to communism.

The attacks were prepared after Communist government officials ordered both Protestant and Catholic ministers to make public statements in favor of the Communist-sponsored national front.

The Protestant message said church leaders had complained to the "supreme government authorities" against teachers who taught children that Jesus Christ never lived and there is no God.

Marine Fatally Shot Near Norfolk; Civilian Is Held

Norfolk, Va., April 23 (U.P.).—Pfc. William Ernest Hendrix, 18-year-old Marine, of Pritchard, Ala., was shot and died almost instantly from a bullet reportedly fired by Capt. G. F. Welch, a civil service policeman, shortly before midnight last night at the Navy amphibious base, Little Creek, according to Navy spokesmen.

The shooting is said to have taken place in a restricted area at the base. Welch, according to Navy spokesmen, reported he observed Hendrix in the restricted area and challenged him. He alleged that the Marine failed to answer the challenge and started to run in the opposite direction. Welch reportedly then fired three warning shots into the air before firing two others in the direction of Hendrix. One of the latter two bullets penetrated Hendrix's back in the region of the left shoulder.

To Speed Policy Decisions Bigger Cold War Role Planned For National Security Council

Losing in Ideological Fight

Soviet Fear Believed Cause Of Cold War's Rising Tension

By Marshall Andrews

Post Reporter

The present state of increased tension between Russia and the West is regarded in high official quarters here as a sign of Soviet weakness and fear, it was learned yesterday.

The same sources do not discount the possibility that development of the atomic bomb might explain, at least in part, Russia's growing recklessness. But the sum of indications, they feel, is that the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is losing its ideological and economic fight in Europe and knows it. Among indications of this trend these have been advanced:

1. Western Europe, assisted by the Marshall Plan, has made great strides toward economic recovery, a fact somewhat obscured by the financial difficulties of Great Britain.

2. Tito's defection from Moscow communism really struck a blow at the heart of Russian progress in Europe and has caused the Soviet considerable trouble. The consequences of Tito's action are indicated by what is happening in eastern Europe, with the Communist parties purging themselves of local fellow travelers. While difficulties remain in Europe, the balance is felt to be quite strongly on the side of the Western powers.

3. The losses in Asia are looked upon as a very considerable reverse to the free nations, but the gain to Russia has not been as great.

Definite Pattern Seen

As a result of these conditions, it is felt that the West is coming to the clear conviction that a major effort will be required to maintain and enlarge upon the present favorable balance. The feeling throughout the Western nations is that they cannot now stand still, that they must do more than that to get results.

A pointed indication of the Soviet state of mind is seen in the turmoil in the satellite countries, with their spy trials, diplomatic intransigence and general belligerence toward the West. In this situation a definite pattern is discerned, a pattern that is taken to mean:

1. That foreign representation in the satellite states is being reduced to the level permitted in Moscow; that is, as little representation as possible without breaking off relations. This step is believed to have been taken because

From Lost Plane? Radio Guide Book Found In Baltic Sea

Stockholm, April 23 (U.P.).—Swedish fishermen found an English-written radio navigational guide book in the Baltic Sea southeast of Sweden today, which may have been from the American Navy Privateer plane that disappeared April 8.

The book contained the names and places of radio location stations. It was picked up north of Segerstad Lighthouse, on Oland Island.

United States Air Force headquarters in Wiesbaden, Germany, said the guide book appeared to be a standard "radio facilities chart."

Likens Method To That of Killer. Gone Amok; Hits 'Filthy Business'

By Edward T. Follard

Post Reporter

Secretary of State Acheson, in a cold fury, told the Nation's editors Saturday night that the campaign to picture the State Department as Communist-infested was "a filthy business" and "vicious madness."

He said the campaign reminded him of the "horrible episode" in 1949, when a madman in Camden, N. J., shot down and killed 13 persons "without sense, without purpose, without direction."

He said it was like a man saying to himself that the "best way to find a fire is to ring every fire alarm in the city," or like Robert Browning's Caliban tearing off the flipper of a crab and then crushing another crab just to "watch it wiggle in agony on the sand."

It was an attempt, he said, to "destroy the confidence the people in their foreign office and in their Government in one of the most critical hours of this Nation's history."

Secretary Acheson took up the "filthy business," as he called it, after making a formal speech at the annual banquet of the American Society of Newspaper Editors in the Statler. His remarks were off the record, but they were taken down, and yesterday the State Department gave them out after making some deletions.

Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.), who brought about the Senate investigation of the State Department by his Communist charges, and who told the editors last week that Acheson was "incompetent," was at Saturday night's banquet and heard the sensational speech.

Secretary Acheson did not mention McCarthy as he went about the business he had cut out for himself: "to clear away some trash which has gathered about the Department of State."

McCarthy, asked for comment, said he was disappointed because he hoped a real "housecleaning" was in the works. The Administration, he said, should certainly know

Gasoline Tax Hike Threatens to Upset British Labor Rule

London, April 23 (U.P.).—An increase of nine pence (10.5 cents) in the cost of a gallon of gasoline has brought repercussions in Britain that threaten to topple the Labor government this week.

When Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Stafford Cripps in his budget message last week announced that revenue collectors would be taking a total of 18 pence (22 cents) for each gallon, it seemed at first to be just another tax boost. The British are pretty well conditioned to taking them without too much grumbling.

But the tax hike, which raised the price of a gallon of gasoline to three shillings (42 cents) has brought on unexpected repercussions and has become, within a week, a major political issue.

The House of Commons will take a vital vote on the budget Wednesday, and opposition leader Winston Churchill has indicated that the government will be subjected to a determined attack.

In addition to persons using motorcycles and automobiles, there have been loud complaints from other quarters.

To enable taxicabs to operate, the Home Secretary authorized operators to tack three pence (3 1/3 cents) to the cost of every ride. The cab drivers don't like it because they believe the riding public will retrieve its 3 pence by reducing the size of tips.

The chancellor was accused of making road haulage expensive to divert business to the nationalized railways, which show big deficits.

Farm Groups Agree Funds Are Wasted

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Uncle Sam is throwing away a lot of money on his farm programs. The news in that statement lies in who is making it. The sources are, believe it or not, two of the largest farm organizations, the American Farm Bureau Federation and the National Farmers Union.

Two protests about the prodigal waste of public funds (which many have long suspected) have come as part of one of the noisiest rows in years between the two traditional enemies.

Set off by the recent attack by Senator George D. Aiken (R., Vt.) on an expense-paid meeting of the Minnesota Production and Marketing Administration in St. Paul, the row threatens not only future but present farm legislation.

On April 15 the AFBF put out a five-page mimeographed report on Aiken's speech and newspaper attacks on Agriculture Secretary Brannan and Senator Hubert H. Humphrey (D., Minn.) for their part in the St. Paul affair.

How They Started

Five days later the Union fired an equally long blast at Government money being spent on the Farm Bureau. Here is the way the two started:

THE FARM BUREAU: "Within a week after $50,000 to $100,000 of public money was spent to assemble an audience of 5000 to hear the Secretary of Agriculture deliver a political speech in St. Paul on April 4—The deal boomeranged."

THE FARMERS UNION: "Millions of dollars of Government funds are being misused every year to build and maintain membership in the American Farm Bureau Federation, to sell its insurance and commercial products and run its errands. President James G. Patton of the National Farmers Union declared today on the recent, much-criticized meeting of the PMA in Minneapolis."

The Farm Bureau attack then went on to say that "First, it boomeranged in Minnesota newspapers, one of which denounced the political propaganda for a captive audience." Then it boomeranged on the floor of the United States Senate, where Senator George D. Aiken said the case is one "which seriously concerns all persons interested in the welfare of American agriculture."

$8 Per Day, Plus

"For more than an hour, on April 11, the Vermonters told his Senate colleagues the story of the 5000 PMA workers in Minnesota who got an invitation they could hardly refuse. The invitation, he said, came from the Minnesota PMA chairman, who assured them they'd be paid $8 a day, plus travel expenses, for going to St. Paul to hear your secretary who is making a terrific fight to want the public to know the true facts" through arbitration proceedings.

C. H. Johnson, C. & P. vice president and general manager, said company officials were "astonished" that the unions were proposing arbitration "and abandoning the principle of collective bargaining."

He said the unions' proposal disregards existing contracts, "which specifically provide that if no agreement is reached in wage re-opening negotiations, the contract will continue in effect with existing wage rates."

Mrs. Palmer charged after yesterday's session with the company that the company has been "stalling" through most of the 3½ months of collective bargaining and that it has refused to give proper consideration to the award of a $2.50 a week wage increase by State-appointed arbitrators in favor of New Jersey Bell Telephone Co. operators last week.

Both divisions here will again meet company officials at 10 a. m. today for further negotiations.

Idle Since Calling Lewis a Dictator, Miner Apologizes

Pittsburgh, April 23 (AP)—Joe Dickmon, the young coal miner who called John L. Lewis a dictator, has apologized.

Dickmon's criticism of the United Mine Workers leader resulted in the Library, Pa., miner's suspension from the union last January. He hasn't worked since. Yesterday Dickmon's appeal was heard by the executive board of UMW District Five.

The 31-year-old digger told UMW District Leader John Busarello that "common sense" showed him he was wrong in calling Lewis names. Dickmon's original criticisms were contained in a letter published in a Pittsburgh paper.

Dickmon now stands a chance of going back to work at the Montour No. 10 mine of Pittsburgh Consolidation Coal Company at Library.

'Pepper Comforts Pro-Reds,' Is Smathers' Main Primary Cry

Miami, Fla., April 23 (AP)—A youthful Florida Congressman is staking his hope of unseating veteran Senator Claude Pepper largely on this issue:

Do Florida voters believe Senator Pepper has given comfort to pro-Communist elements?

Representative George Smathers of Miami, seeking a seat in the Senate after two terms in the House, says Pepper has done just that. He is making the accusation the focal issue of his campaign.

Pepper denies the charge hotly. He says it is "nothing in the world but a Republican campaign ploy."

Florida voters will decide the issue in the May 2 Democratic primary, regarded as equivalent to election in this traditionally Democratic State. Since there are only two candidates—J. G. Horrell of Orlando, withdrew in Smathers' favor—no runoff will be required.

Naming One a Day

Smathers, a husky Marine Corps veteran, recently began naming at the rate of one a day groups which, he said, were Communist or pro-Communist and which, he claimed, Senator Pepper had addressed or helped in some way.

Pepper counters by branding communism "an odious doctrine" which he is fighting "through voting for the Marshall Plan and arms for Europe, and working for better medical care, broader social security protection and other advantages."

Smathers, 36, tells listeners that Pepper's 14 years of seniority in the Senate is a threat to national security because he is fourth in line of Democrats on the powerful Foreign Relations Committee, and if named chairman would "have a lot to do with relations between the United States and Russia."

Pepper, 49, retorts: "Republican Senators have been hurling charges of communism against the Secretary of State, against the President, our ambassadors and our United Nations representatives. Republican Senators have announced they will go on repeating these charges. And here in Florida my opponent has announced that he is going to make these same charges every day. He has been following the now apparent Republican plan."

Sharply Drawn Issues

There have been several issues sharply drawn. Smathers assails "socialized medicine." Pepper favors a national health insurance program.

Smathers indorses the Taft-Hartley act as "basically good." Pepper opposes it.

Each side has raised the racial issue. Smathers canceled a talk to a Negro group when newspaper photographers showed up. Pepper asserted he had affidavits to prove that a Negro had been paid $25 to rush up and shake his hand at a Leesburg rally.

Florida voters have been stirred by the campaign. Registration is at a new peak. Many Republicans are changing over to Democratic affiliation. Just what this means remains to be seen.

The Republicans have a senatorial candidate of their own. He is John P. Booth of Miami. But the party is now holding no primary election because the few who have announced for office are unopposed.

Pepper and Smathers have gone into every corner of the state except the Florida Keys. President Truman's month-long vacation at Key West—and the President's neutrality in the intra-party fight—apparently caused both candidates to shun that area for the time being.

Even the President's daughter,

Margaret, was impartial when the two candidates attended a Miami reception after a singing appearance. She declined to be photographed with either separately, but willingly posed with both.

The senatorial nomination is the only important statewide prize in the May 2 primary. The four-year terms of Gov. Fuller Warren and other major state officers have two years yet to run.

Hoffman's View

Business 'Climate' Is U. S. Job

Foreign Aid Administrator Paul G. Hoffman said yesterday it is the duty of Government to establish the "climate" in which the Nation's business men operate.

Hoffman

Chicago University Round Table of the Air program over the National Broadcasting Co. network. The three agreed that the national philosophy had changed materially since the 1930s. During the depression years, Hoffman said, everybody was fighting to "get his share of the pie; now the idea is to make a bigger pie."

Hentzen said that right now there are two "soft spots" in the domestic economy—the Federal deficit and unemployment. Hoffman said the national economy gets its "dynamism" from the fact that American businessmen are free to make their own decisions, as compared with those in many other countries. He recalled the great growth of United States productivity since 1900 and contrasted it with a decline in Europe.

"The Government establishes the climate in which business operates," he said, "but when it starts to ration the rain drops it gets out of hand. In this connection, he observed that there is 'no substitute for competition when it comes to keeping business men lying awake nights trying to figure out ways to bring down prices.'"

(Copyright, 1950, by United Press)
London, April 23.—The Atlantic Pact countries are spending nearly 20 billion dollars a year on armaments, a survey disclosed today. The United States is carrying about 75 percent of the cold-war financial burden.

Today's totals may be only the beginning of the West's efforts to arm itself against a possible attack on western Europe, to "contain" communism in the Far East and to create strength for "total diplomacy" against the Soviet Union.

The United States will be called upon soon to foot even more of the Atlantic community's over-all and expanding defense budget, especially when Marshall Plan aid ends in 1952.

Survey of Budgets

A survey of the current budgets for the Atlantic Pact nations shows:

Total government expenses, $66,719,000,000.

Total budgeted for defense, $17,881,000,000.

America's military-aid program, $1,000,000,000.

United States defense budget, $13,100,000,000.

Thus, the United States is spending 74.67 percent of all the money budgeted by the Atlantic Pact members for defense.

Even in these days of astronomical figures, $18,881,000,000 for defense—the budget totals plus America's military aid to Europe—is a lot of money. It amounts to more than $50 a year for every man, woman and child under the Atlantic Pact; it's as much as the United States spent for everything from 1789 until after 1900; it's about half the total cost of World War I, including pensions, to American taxpayers; it's twice as much as the over-all British government budget this year.

Other Efforts Not Included

Roughly speaking, this sum represents the military cost of the cold war and of Western efforts to prevent a "hot war." It doesn't count the multibillion-dollar economic efforts of Marshall aid and other American economic programs.

These military costs are not only colossal but unprecedented for peacetime. Before the last war, America's military budgets were so small they were hardly noticeable. Today they tower over the combined military budgets of all the countries this side of the iron curtain.

But the West's military establishment is not nearly ready for a test—if one develops. The military experts claim the Atlantic Pact countries need at least 30 combat divisions to defend western Europe.

The most optimistic estimates now place the Atlantic Pact combat forces at no more than 12 or 13 divisions, scattered throughout the different countries.

Burma's Envoy Ill, Yielding Post in U. S.

Rangoon, Burma, April 23 (P).—The government announced today that U. So. Nyun, Burma's Ambassador to the United States, is being forced by serious illness to relinquish his post in Washington. A spokesman said the ambassador is afflicted with cancer of the liver and that his condition is critical. He is expected to arrive home within a few days in the care of an American nurse.

Col. Rusch, formerly a member of General MacArthur's occupation staff, is executive vice president of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, Episcopal men's organization, in Japan.

Russian Baltic Purge Reported

Berlin, April 23 (P).—The Russians are conducting a purge in the Baltic republics to protect coastal defense secrets in the general area where they claim an American plane attempted to make photographs, the official American newspaper here reported today.

Neue Zeitung, published by the Information Services Division of the United States High Commissioner's Office, said its information came from Baltic refugees in Sweden.

The newspaper quoted them as saying the Russians feared a fifth column of Baltic nationalists along the strategic coastline where Russia is reported to have submarine pens and rocket-launching sites.

The United States has charged Russia with shooting down an unarmed United States Navy Privateer and its crew of 10 over the open Baltic Sea. The Privateer disappeared April 8 while on a flight to Copenhagen from Wiesbaden.

A Swedish customs official said a rubber life raft, which possibly belonged to the missing Privateer, appeared to have been torn by bullet holes when it was picked up in the Baltic.

The raft arrived in Wiesbaden, United States Air Force base in Germany, today. Authorities said it would not be examined until it reaches Port Lyautey, Morocco, North Africa, United States Navy base.

Neue Zeitung said the Russians have removed "tens of thousands" of Baltic nationals and resettled them in the interior of the Soviet Union to safeguard their coastal fortifications from spies and saboteurs. Russian farmers have been settled in the vacated Baltic lands—Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania—which Russia annexed 10 years ago, the paper said. The United States never has recognized Soviet acquisition of the three countries.

Neue Zeitung said the purge is most intensive in Estonia, where "many patriotic Estonians" are being removed from government posts after being denounced as "Quislings" or "Titoists." These, as well as the farmers, are being replaced by Russians, Neue Zeitung said.

The Soviet army newspaper in Germany, Tagliche Rundschau, charged the United States is plotting "more provocative flights" over the Baltic area.

World Bank Has Big Post-ERP Role

By the United Press

World Bank President Eugene R. Black predicted yesterday that the international lending agency will steadily gain in importance as direct United States foreign aid programs such as the Marshall Plan come to an end.

He discussed the bank's role in world affairs in a radio interview. Meantime the bank issued a financial statement showing it has made a total of 24 reconstruction and development loans totaling $744,145,000 since it was established at the Bretton Woods Conference of 1944.

Of the total loan commitments, $594,986,266 has already been paid out.

The bank's net income during the nine months ended March 31 was reported at $9,856,856, a rise of more than two million dollars over the comparable period of 1949.

Black said the bank was never meant to meet the emergency situation which prevailed in western Europe after the war, and it was necessary to launch the European Recovery Program to fill the gap.

Rayburn to Ask Plenty of Powder For Potential Foe

Cape Henry, Va., April 23 (P).—House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D, Tex.) said here today that "I am going to lead with the House to keep a lot of powder—and to keep that powder dry—as long as there is a potential enemy of democracy."

"We live in the most dangerous world in which anyone now living has ever lived," Rayburn told some 500 modern-day pilgrims in the principal address of the twenty-fourth annual Cape Henry pilgrimage.

Rayburn explained that he would like to see the Federal budget balanced, but he assured his listeners that he was not in favor of doing it at the expense of national defense.

"Isolationism is the word I hate most," the House speaker asserted.

"The bank was created to meet long-term needs which will remain in Europe when the present emergency is over," he said. "As cut-backs take place in the amounts of aid provided through ERP, it is logical to assume that the ERP countries will look to the bank and to private investors as the principal sources of the foreign capital they need for sound, long-term investment projects."

Black said the bank now is placing main emphasis on "development" loans as opposed to post-war reconstruction credits. He cited recent loans to India as examples.

Report Cites Gains for U. S. In ITO Ranks

By the United Press

The United States would further its own economic interests by taking part in the International Trade Organization, a report published by the Brookings Institution said yesterday.

The report was prepared by Dr. William Adams Brown, Jr., a professor of political economy at Brown University. Secretary of State Dean Acheson last week made a personal plea to Congress to ratify the ITO agreement and lead the way for other nations.

After reviewing arguments for and against the ITO, Dr. Brown concludes that "the weight of the argument is strongly in its favor."

"It lays down a code of international conduct in which free enterprise and state trading countries can advance toward a multilateral, nondiscriminatory system of trade, and one in which American private enterprise can compete on equitable terms," he said. Dr. Brown found "no basis" for fears that the organization would allow international interference with U. S. domestic policy.

Founder of Catholic Society Raised to Sainthood by Pope

By the United Press

Vatican City, April 23 (P).—The bronze bells of St. Peter's Basilica today rang out the news of the Holy Year's first canonization—that of Marie Emile de Rodat.

Pope Pius—leading the colorful pageantry that raised the Frenchwoman to the list of the Church's elect—praised the life of the new saint and urged Catholics throughout the world to take it as their example.

Marie Emile de Rodat, born of a noble family at Rodez, France, Sept. 6, 1787, dedicated herself from her earliest years to aiding the poor, and, especially, to caring for children and the sick. She was the founder of the religious congregation of the Sisters of the Sacred Family.

Members of the organization, which now has houses in France, Belgium, Spain, Brazil, Syria, Egypt, England, Switzerland and Italy, were among the estimated 60,000 who witnessed the ceremony.

The Pope appeared rested as he read a Latin homily exalting the life and work of the new saint. All difficult times, he said, have seen the appearance of men and women who especially devoted themselves to good works. Thus, he said, in the difficult period that followed the French revolution there were many such, and among these Marie Emile de Rodat.

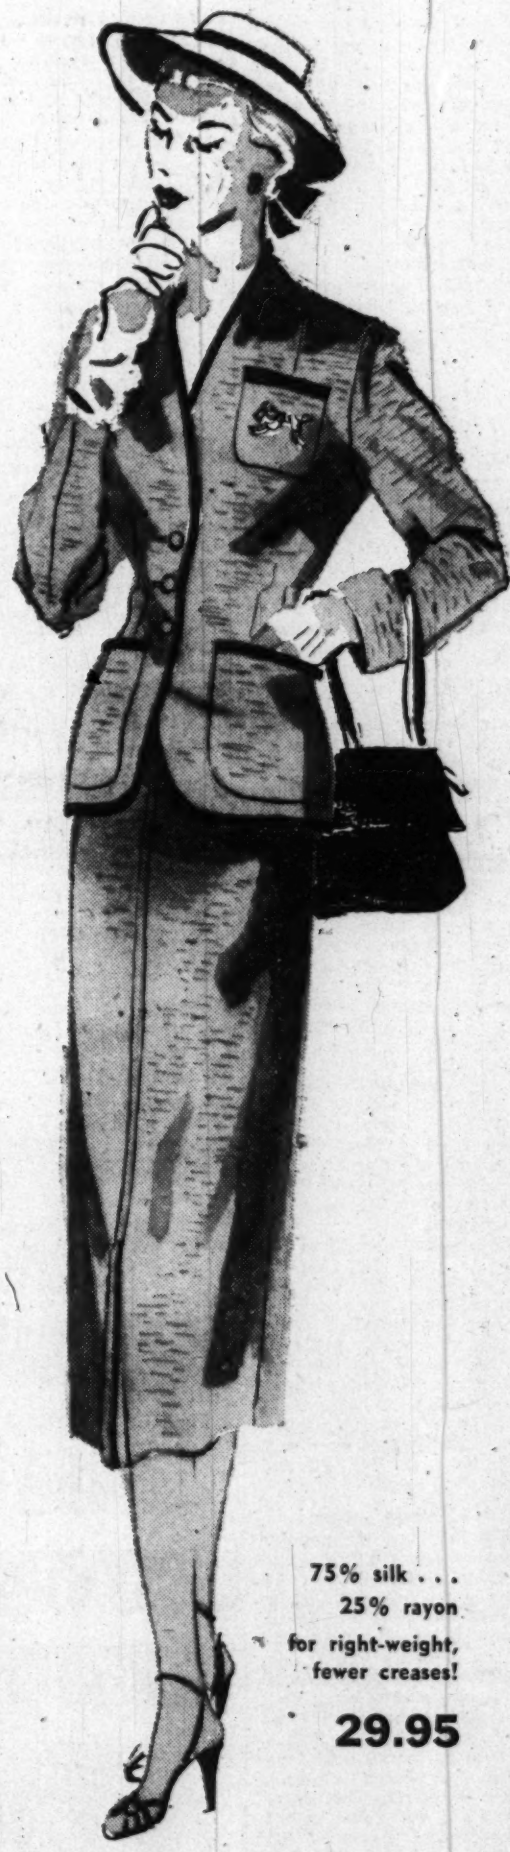

Tonight, the great dome of St. Peter's Basilica was illuminated in honor of the new saint.

Everything at Steak!

By Albert P. Mesirov

APRIL is the spoiled darling of the calendar. One moment it drives us to distraction with its wilfulness and petulance. But the next moment, April is all charm, bright, kindly, warming the country-side with its sunny good nature. Like trusting parents, we are momentarily lulled into a feeling of security for the future that is entirely unjustified by past performance. For in the twinkling of an eye, April will turn on us again, and blast us out of our brief complacency with wild behavior and a torrent of tears. Such capriciousness is very discouraging, and I, for one, while always happy to see April arrive, am invariably even happier to see her go.

If you are of the same mind, and feel frustrated and shaken by the caprice of April, allow me to suggest that here, in Parchey's, the tired soul and hungry body can find solace for a brief interval from the cruel buffeting of an unpredictable world. Take ten minutes extra at lunch time and relax in the cool, quiet of our spotless dining room, air-conditioned for your comfort and decorated in restful, soothing colors. You will be waited on by smiling, silent and highly skilled messengers of your will, clothed in white coats, and equipped by Nature with a sixth sense that divines your wishes almost before you yourself know them.

Call for a cocktail... a sparkling Martini, crystal-clear, topped with a tiny twist of lemon peel and snuggling, in its depths, a tiny olive. Or, a ruby-red Manhattan, fragrant and smooth, decked with a bright crimson cherry. Sip slowly, savoring each delicious drop. Feel the warm glow of contentment steal over you as your awakened appetite clamors for attention! In a moment, your meal will be before you, steaming hot, redolent with the tantalizing aroma of fine beef, blended with the fragrance of onions simmered in a rich sauce!

And what a meal! A great, thick patty of splendidly aged tenderloin, chopped (not ground) to the exact degree of texture perfection... then shaped and broiled precisely as you wish it; mouth-watering, fabulously tender, succulently bubbling its rich, natural juices... and drenched with an incomparable sauce of sweet Bermuda onion bits, browned in creamery butter and left to bubble in delicately seasoned stock! With this ambrosial delight, you will be served a great pile of golden, crisp, tender stalks of French fried potatoes, and a heaping saucer of Parchey's own inimitable creamed cole slaw, the secret of which only one man knows!

Feast yourself on these delights... and then face the turbulent world again with new faith, new hope, new courage and new determination! Your time and your money will have been well spent, for this epicurean lunch will have cost you only one dollar... your cocktail a mere fifty cents additional! Try it this very day! Parchey's is at 19th St. and K N.W.

David Brinkley, the popular NBC news commentator, came in last week and, while enjoying a filet mignon, remarked that he likes our column. We like your column, too, Dave! That eminent Washington hotelman, Mr. Russell Kahn, managed to sneak past his own chef to come over and partake of some of our Chef Heller's excellent fare. (Note: I personally prefer our food, too!) The famous Detroit tycoon, sportsman and gourmet, Jackson A. Mark, wrote that he had happened across a copy of The Post, read our column and, as a result, would be rushing down here to sample our wares. And Mr. Louis S. Dyson who, before his six years of Government service as a Marketing Specialist in beef, had spent 17 years with Armour & Co. as a buyer of fancy beef, paid us the supreme compliment of a professional gourmet as he pushed back his chair Wednesday evening: "As fine a steak as I have ever eaten!" Thank you, Thank you!

You will hear many conflicting opinions and theories when the subject of wine with meals is brought up. One school of thought maintains that only a barbarian would serve anything but red wine with meat, white wine with fish and fowl. I myself am partisan to the theory that the best wine with any dish is that which you most enjoy. If you are in doubt try a delicious Chianti: dry, red table wine as light as a summer breeze and as refreshing. A bottle of our Chianti, ample for 2, costs only eighty-five cents and adds both flavor and graciousness to your meal. Our address is 19th and K sts., n.w.

China Policy Group Invites Full Inquiry

The American China Policy Association—which often has been mentioned in the current Senate loyalty investigation—announced yesterday it would welcome a full investigation of the association and its 62 directors.

The offer was contained in a telegram sent by William Loeb, president of the association, to Senator Millard Tydings (D., Md.), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee investigating charges by Senator Joseph McCarthy (R., Wis.) that Far Eastern expert Owen Lattimore was a member of the Communist Party.

The telegram takes note of the fact that Lattimore declared here Friday that the "China Lobby"—the association—"in all its sinister ramifications, should be thoroughly investigated and completely exposed."

"The telegram continues: 'As president of the American China Policy Association, of which Alfred Kohlberg, frequently referred to by Lattimore in most uncomplimentary terms, is chairman of the board of directors, I would be delighted to welcome full investigation of all the association's activities and of the 62 patriotic Americans who are its directors.'

"J. B. Powell, famed American newsman, who subsequently died as result of tortures suffered in Japanese prison camp, was the association's first president. I am the third. Among the directors are Dr. Roscoe Pound, dean emeritus of Harvard Law School; Hon. Walter Judd of Minnesota; J. Leroy Johnson of California; William Henry Chamberlin, distinguished American writer; Bishop Frederick Pierce Corson, George Creel, publicist."

"The American China Policy Association carries on no smear campaigns against individuals but is dedicated to attempting to persuade this Nation to return to its traditional open-door policy toward China, a policy founded by John Hay and Theodore Roosevelt and carried out by every American President up to and including Franklin Roosevelt until the Yalta surrender."

"This policy was based on the common-sense idea that if any foreign power dominated China it would soon dominate all Asia and threaten the fundamental security of the United States."

Thousands of American boys died in the tropical jungles after Pearl Harbor to keep Japan from dominating Asia and the Pacific. What these American boys died to save Lattimore would not now throw carelessly away, in keeping with a theory which has brought nothing but failure and defeat to the United States."

In his previous testimony, however, he said that Lattimore was "commended" by Browder in 1937 for getting Communists on the staff of the magazine, and that he was given the assignment of helping spread propaganda doctrines favorable to the Chinese Communists.

Browder has denied describing Lattimore to Budenz as a Communist. Dr. Bella V. Dodd, former member of the Communist Party national committee, also has said she never heard Lattimore mentioned as a Communist.

Columbian Doris Fleeson, a member of the interviewing panel, remarked that Budenz's formula left no room for an innocent man to defend himself.

Acheson Calls Charges 'Filthy'

"That the Alger Hiss case is not found alone." The Wisconsin legislator added: "It (Acheson's speech) indicates that the head of the State Department goes along 100 percent with the Tydings, McMahon, Truman idea that a real criminal is the man trying to expose Communists and perverts in Government and not the Communists who are trying to betray this Nation."

The premier member of the Cabinet, ordinarily cool and urbane, made no attempt to hide his anger as he faced his audience, made up of 500 editors, their wives and guests.

He made it clear at the outset he was not going to be defensive about the State Department—that there was no need for anyone to be defensive about it.

"Pour it on, Mr. Secretary!" cried Joseph Pulitzer, editor of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Acheson evoked a laugh when he talked about his qualifications to "clear away (the) trash."

He mentioned his 10 years of service in the State Department under four Secretaries and two Presidents.

"I have a qualification," he said, "which is so unique that it almost amounts to a disqualification. That is, I know what I am talking about."

"I should like to say that never in its long and honorable history has the Department of State ever been in better shape than it is today."

"The Department is manned today, as it has been manned in the past, by able, by honorable, by loyal, and by clean-living American men and women."

He went on to list the key men in the department and outline their background, and occasionally a sharp note of sarcasm got into his voice.

In mentioning Adrian Fisher, the department's legal adviser, he noted that he was a bomber navigator in World War II and hailed from Tennessee.

"And I note as I go along here," Acheson said, "that we seemed to be loaded up with old-fashioned Southern 'Communists'—no doubt of the Cordell Hull, Walter George, Tom Connally type."

"Right Way and Wrong?" He reminded the editors that the State Department's loyalty board was headed by Gen. Conrad Snow.

An old-fashioned New Hampshire Republican 'Communist,' a man who, incidentally, is vouched for by Senator Bridges.

He pointed out that the persons checked by the department's loyalty board are checked again, by the President's Loyalty Board.

And this one, he noted, was headed by Seth Richardson, a former Assistant Attorney General under President Hoover.

Richardson's associates on the board, he said, did not work for the Government, but were citizens who were giving their time and devotion to the Government.

"That is the right way," Acheson continued. "The wrong way is to smear everybody's reputation; to make charges on the basis that, if one is not right, you try to find another one you hope will stick; to try to destroy the confidence of people in their Foreign Office and in their Government in one of the most critical hours of this Nation's history—to do all of those things, and to make it absolutely certain, as a result, that under no circumstances could you ever possibly find a spy in the whole place."

Makes Fire Alarm Analogy "It is as though you said to yourself that the best way to find a fire is to ring every fire alarm in the city; not that you know of any fire, but if you get all the apparatus out and have it wheeling around through the streets, you might find one."

"But I think what is going on is much madder and more vicious than that. It reminds me more of that horrible episode in Camden, N. J., which happened not so long ago, when a madman came out on the street in the morning with his revolver."

"With no purpose and with no plan, as he walked down the street, he just shot people; one was a woman coming out of a store; a man with his wife in an automobile. That automobile happened to stop because the light turned red. The car ahead of him went on. The car behind him was not where the madman was. So the madman just walked up and shot everybody in the car, without sense, without purpose, without direction."

"You remember, I am sure, that poem of Browning's called Caliban Upon Setebas. Caliban is talking about this horrible amoral god of his. He says that his god operates in the way that Caliban himself does on the beach."

"Along comes, says Caliban, a procession of crabs going down to the sea across the sand. And he says something like this: 'I stand there and I let 20 go by. The twenty-first I pick up and tear off a flipper. I let three more go by. The next one I crush in order to watch it wiggle in agony on the sand,' and so on."

"It is that degree of vicious madness which has been going on here."

Acheson paused, and then told the editors he was not asking them for sympathy or help.

"You are in a worse situation than I am," he said. "I and my associates are only the intended victims of this mad and vicious operation. But you, unhappily—by reason of your calling—are participants. You are unwilling participants, disgusted participants, but nevertheless, participants, and your position is far more serious than mine."

"As I leave this filthy business, and I hope never to speak of it again, I should like to leave in your minds the words of John Donne in his 'Meditations,' in which he says:

'Any man's death diminishes me, because I am involved in mankind. And therefore do not send to know for whom the bell tolls; It tolls for thee.'

Secretary Acheson's bold answer to his department's critics took longer to deliver than his speech on "total diplomacy," which was broadcast. He moved many, but apparently left some still uncertain. It was clear, however, that he was heartened by the applause that arose from the audience.

By a coincidence, Secretary Acheson made his off-the-record talk a few hours after the American Society of Newspaper Editors had adopted a resolution denouncing censorship of news in the guise of off-the-record information. He was under pressure following the banquet, to put his remarks on the record.

Copies of the transcription were handed to reporters at the State Department yesterday afternoon by Michael J. McDermott, who has been handling press relations since the Wilson Administration.

Acheson got a laugh when, in listing his lieutenants in the State Department, he referred to "that old friend of yours, Mike McDermott—and you know what sort of a 'Communist' he is."

Others he cited, using their familiar first names, were Undersecretary Jim Webb of Carolina, George Kennan of Wisconsin, Jack Peurifoy of South Carolina, Jack Hickerson of Texas, George McGhee of Texas, Ed Barrett of Alabama, Dean Rusk of Georgia, Walton Butterworth of Louisiana; several New Yorkers, including Eddie Miller, George Perkins, Willard Thorp, Park Armstrong and Jack Ohly; Jack McFall of Colorado and Indiana, Paul Nitze of Massachusetts and Col. Henry Byroade, who was borrowed from the Army to handle German problems.

Problem Now of "Amateurs" "Now," said Acheson, "we have also brought in Phil Jessup, Senator Dulles of New York and Senator Cooper of Kentucky. You can imagine how helpful they would be in covering up all 'subversive' activities."

"Here in this top command, I say to you, we have men as distinguished, as able, as powerful and as vigorous as any of my great predecessors, from John Marshall to George Marshall, ever had in the Department of State."

Acheson said it was not strange that efforts should be made to penetrate the State Department.

"Efforts of that sort have been made throughout the history of the United States," he said, "and they are being made today. In the past, these efforts have been made by professionals. But with the spread of this fanatical doctrine of communism, the old profession of professional spies is under competition from amateurs."

"Now, this creates difficulty. We are familiar with the methods of counterespionage and the security methods which we have used in the past to protect ourselves from professional spies. In the last few years we have had a new problem to solve—and we have gone about solving it."

"There is a right way to solve that problem, and there is a wrong way to solve it. The right way to solve the problem is to go at it from the point of view of meeting the evil which confronts you and preserving the institution which you are trying to protect."

"The wrong way is one in which you do not meet the evil that you are trying to protect. Not only do you destroy that, but you destroy the faith of the country in its Government and its institutions. You destroy the faith of our allies in us and you delight our enemies."

He said that the right way was set up by his predecessor, Gen. George C. Marshall, in 1947, when, at the President's direction, he set up the department's loyalty program.

Acheson described how the loyalty screening is done—how a staff of 74 investigators under a Hickerson of Texas, George McGhee of Texas, Ed Barrett of Ala-gation work and how J. Edgar Hoover's FBI cooperates in the work.

"By one method or another," Acheson said, "all people who come into the department and all those who are in it have gone through a thorough screening process. This is a process which is not based on the idea that all these people are crooks. It is a process which is based, first, on protecting the United States but, at the same time, protecting the individuals' rights, protecting their reputations, urging and permitting them to continue to serve the United States with enthusiasm."

Senate Evidence in State Department Probe Will Be Turned Over to FBI, Tydings Says

By The Associated Press

Senator Tydings (D., Md.) said yesterday that all evidence dug up by the Senate's investigation of State Department loyalties will go to the FBI whose big staff, he said, could have done a "much better job" of it, anyway.

Tydings is chairman of a Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee investigating contentions by Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) that the department is harboring a lot of Communists and fellow travelers.

"All the evidence we get in the matter will, of course, be turned over to the FBI," Tydings declared. "If they come up with a spy or a Communist, they will notify the proper prosecuting authorities of the Government."

The result will be the same as if the FBI had tackled it at the start, he observed.

Discussing the inquiry in a radio talk, Tydings said: "I think everybody in America, including myself, has a great deal of confidence in Mr. J. Edgar Hoover."

Hoover's FBI cooperates in the work.

"By one method or another," Acheson said, "all people who come into the department and all those who are in it have gone through a thorough screening process. This is a process which is not based on the idea that all these people are crooks. It is a process which is based, first, on protecting the United States but, at the same time, protecting the individuals' rights, protecting their reputations, urging and permitting them to continue to serve the United States with enthusiasm."

ver, the head of the FBI, and in the FBI itself.

"Looking back on it, it might have been better if the Senate, instead of conducting this investigation itself, had turned it all over to the FBI, with orders to investigate all charges thoroughly and then make its report to this committee."

"It (the FBI) has thousands of agents familiar with this work and they would have done a much better job, in my opinion, than we can do with our limited time and small staff, to run down a lot of clues that have very far-reaching possibilities."

But Tydings said that's all "gone by the boards now" and the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee conducting the inquiry will "push it to a conclusion as fairly and fully and completely as we can."

The committee will meet behind closed doors today. It may deal with reports on undisclosed "new avenues of investigation" which the committee a week ago instructed its staff to explore.

Russian Fear Seen In Rising Tension of Russian worry, fright and weakness; the Tito defection was frightening and the tendency behind it must be controlled. The Communists can't take chances, can't carry on their own program so long as their people are in touch with the Western world.

The espionage conviction of Robert Vogel, an American citizen, by a Hungarian court is considered a case directly related to this pattern. It is regarded here as a warning to satellite peoples, not to associate with Americans, British or French.

2. That the Communists have raised the tempo of their harassment in Europe as the preliminary for some other effort. It would not cause surprise if this effort should turn out to be a bid for negotiations that the Soviets might hope would lead to concessions from the West.

Among the harassments that fit into the pattern are many incidents that have occurred in recent weeks. These include:

1. Destruction of an unarmed United States Navy airplane by Soviet fighters.
2. The present direction of events in Berlin.
3. Recent Russian demands that the Dardanelles be opened up, a demand that it is felt here was made solely to stir up trouble.
4. The Soviet demand that Western troops be withdrawn from Trieste, which is regarded as an effort to create trouble between Italy and Yugoslavia.

5. Interference with arms shipments from the United States to Western nations. The fact that this interference has proved highly unpopular in the countries involved, requiring the Communists to risk their standing in those countries, is regarded as an indication they attach great importance to the arms shipments.

Berlin is considered next on the calendar of major world developments and what happens there is regarded as holding the key to the future. As far as the Western nations are concerned, it was made clear that any attempt to invade the western sectors of Berlin, by East Berlin Communist youth or anyone else, will be firmly resisted.

If such peaceful means as tear gas and fire hose fail to break up any marches or demonstrations, there will be no hesitancy in using rifles and machine guns.

There is no disposition among the Western powers to yield an inch in Berlin to any sort of force or to permit the West Berliners to be intimidated by armed marchers as in the time of Hitler. However, there is some doubt in officials' minds here that the threatened May demonstration by Communist youth actually will be carried out. Considerable reluctance on the part of Russians and East Germans to volunteer for the riskier duties in such an invasion have been detected.

Dad-Son Fete Set Saturday

The twenty-seventh annual father and son banquet for all faiths, sponsored by the Brotherhood of the Holy Spirit, will be held at 6 p. m. next Sunday at the Mayflower Hotel.

Sidney Lust, veteran Washington showman and theater owner, who will be general chairman of the affair, expects a record attendance of more than 800 fathers and sons.

Highlighting the banquet entertainment will be Ted Mack and contestants from his amateur hour television show. A circus motif will be featured at the affair, with freaks and other performers from the Johnny J. Jones Expositions forming a "midway" in the hotel corridor.

I WAS THERE AND I KNOW!

Herman Holstein, advertising manager: "A family man has to hunt the best vacation bargain possible—and I've found it! Florida in summer offers everything the millionaires enjoy in winter—at about one-tenth the price. We took lots of sightseeing tours while we were in Miami, and the youngsters sure got a kick out of seeing The Little White House at Key West."

Charmione E. Wheeler, night club photographer: "Imagine paying only $2 a day for a room in those swank ocean-front hotels! The beautiful room I had costs plenty in winter, believe me. When you work hard the rest of the year, you really appreciate living in such luxury for two whole weeks—I felt like a queen! Marie Weller, switchboard operator: "I was a little doubtful about climate when I chose Florida for last summer's vacation, but now I'm sold! There was a cool ocean breeze day and night, and the temperature average was only 80.6°. Another thing I especially liked was the uncrowded beaches. Plenty of space to stretch out and relax!"

John Williams, insurance representative: "Man, oh man, the wonderful fishing that Florida offers in summer! A whole day with a charter group aboard a deep-sea fishing boat, for only $1.50—and marlin and sailfish just begging to bite. I got in some good golf and tennis, too—I can hardly wait to get to Florida again this year."

Jeannette C. White, secretary: "I've traveled before, but I've never enjoyed such wonderful comfort and service as on my National Airlines flight to Florida. Roomy seats, wide windows, and delicious food. What makes it best of all is that comfort and service were combined with National's low summer fares!"

35 Bodies Found In C-54 Wreckage

Mount Hirugatake, Japan, April 23 (U.P.).—Search parties found the bodies of 35 Americans today in the wreckage of a United States Air Force C-54 plane near the peak of this mountain where it crashed and burned Friday night.

Discovery of the wreckage ended a search in which 2700 American military personnel and more than 800 Japanese participated. Helicopters, a B-17 and light observation planes from nearby Johnson Air Base were employed.

Five of the plane's 27 passengers were high officials in Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters, who were returning to Tokyo from Manila.

The wreckage was spotted first by the B-17 through a break in the clouds. Parts of it were strewn over a 300-yard area amid scorched trees.

The first person to reach the wreckage scene was Staff Sgt. Alvin G. Gladson of Albia, Iowa, who parachuted from the B-17 at 3 p. m. today (1 a. m. EST). He directed communications with ground parties and two helicopters hovering overhead.

The plane was only five minutes short of its destination, Tachikawa Airport, west of Tokyo, when it plunged into the mountain's southwest slope near the 5000-foot peak.

Preparations were being made to remove the bodies to a mortuary at the armed forces cemetery at Yokohama. A memorial division group from the Eighth Army Quartermaster Section hoped to return the bodies there late Monday night.

Maj. George F. McGinn of Catonsville, Md., head of the group of eight men, said that immediate identification of the bodies would be made at the scene, as far as possible.

He's for self-made security!

"I'm no customer for this free security you hear about these days," says DONALD M. CLARK, 26. He's organized his own aerial crop-spraying business in Delaware! "There are plenty of chances to boe your own row... now more than ever."

"There's one real source of your security"

...and these people know it

From the stories of the people shown here, you'll agree there's still opportunity to get ahead in America... to earn real security.

What is real security? It's the kind that comes from the work people do and what they save.

When you come right down to facts, even such security as is provided by government must be paid for out of the earnings of the people. Government's income is from taxes, whether you pay them directly or whether they come from the businesses whose goods and services you buy. Either way, all taxes eventually come out of your pocket.

Security needs differ with every family; so plans for security must be individually arranged. That is why 80 million Americans are using life insurance to build their own security.

To do this most effectively, they get the experienced advice of the life insurance agent. For the agent is a specialist in helping people get the full benefit of their hard-earned security dollars. There are more than 150,000 of these trained men and women, devoting their lives to this service.

is the increasing popularity of
GIANT EGGS

Unmistakably, the "swing" is to GIANT EGGS for they're all U. S. Graded "AA" or "A" (no other grades are permitted in Giant stores), and they're all from nearby farms specializing in the scientific raising of hens for the production of better quality eggs.

What Makes a Good Egg?

GIANT knows an egg's most important points are its freshness and quality. That's why GIANT handles only eggs from nearby farms—we bring you eggs of "top" quality in their freshest condition. Egg quality depends on the breeding, care, and proper scientific feeding of the chickens. That's why GIANT gets its eggs from farmers whose sole attention and scientific knowledge is devoted to outstanding egg production. You, too, will be better satisfied with GIANT eggs.

Congress Library To Mark Birthday

Aside from a muffled sound of hammering behind a closed door, the Library of Congress yesterday, on the eve of its 150th anniversary, led its normal Sunday life.

Sightseeing buses disgorged their passengers to inspect the world's greatest library, the nearby Capitol and Supreme Court, and the library's main reading room as usual was filled with more than 250 students.

The sound of hammering came from a gallery, where in a last bit of overtime work the finishing touches were being given to one of three exhibitions opening today.

Today the library will note the 150th anniversary of President John Adams's signing a bill appropriating $5000 for a library for Congress.

Today, a century and a half later, another President, Harry S. Truman, in a letter to Librarian of Congress Luther H. Evans said the anniversary "deserves the grateful attention of the American people and their Government . . . because the history of the Library exemplifies the history of our American institutions; it is tangible evidence, not of endurance only, but of the strength, the energy and the capacity for growth which our institutions have demonstrated so well."

The national library's collections and services could never have been fashioned without the power of the principle of free inquiry and the support of that principle by the people and the Congress," the President added.

In the great hall of the chief library building a reception will be held from 5 to 7 p. m. today. Members of Congress, the Cabinet, the heads of independent Government agencies, the Federal judiciary, diplomatic corps, the White House secretariat, District Commissioners, the library's staff and colleagues in other institutions, and others have been invited to attend.

A feature of the reception will be the opening of the Sesqui-centennial exhibition of the library's own history, a District of Columbia Sesqui-centennial exhibition and the "Pennell" show of prints.

In a 3 p. m. ceremony in Dr. Evans' office, Isabel Hoagland Robert, of Garden City, N. Y., 88-year-old widow of Brig. Gen. Henry Martyn Robert, author of "Robert's Rules of Order," will present to the library a group of original items relating to the writing of the classic book on parliamentary procedure. Some 1,350,000 copies of the book have been sold since it was first published February 19, 1876.

Two Convicts Return to Jail In Taxicab

Luray, Va., April 23 (Sp.)—Two hungry brothers who had been hunted for four days after breaking out of Page County Jail drew up to the jail today in a taxicab and gave themselves up.

They surrendered to Deputy Sheriff David B. Campbell, the jailer they overpowered and locked in a cell when they went on leave early Wednesday morning.

Melvin Sours, 21, and his brother, Henry, 20, explained they were afraid they would be "recognized and picked up" by police if they walked through town.

Since their break, they said, they had been hiding in the brush along the Shenandoah River. A posse with bloodhounds had been after them during that time. Both live near Luray.

Commonwealth Attorney I. R. Dovel said he would charge the brothers with assault on Campbell. They will face a charge of housebreaking, which brought them to jail in the first place, at a May 22 session of Circuit Court here.

Envoy Leaves Athens

Athens, April 23 (P.)—U. S. Ambassador Henry F. Grady left in his own plane this morning for London on the first leg of an eight-week home leave. An Embassy spokesman said he will remain in the British capital for three days for conferences with United States Ambassador Lewis Douglas.

Couple Overcome By Gas in Auto Rigged for Death

Bel Air, Md., April 23 (P.)—An automobile rigged for death side-swiped a tree near Bel Air early today when the young couple inside passed out from inhaling carbon monoxide gas.

A State trooper summoned to the scene reported he found a length of rubber hose leading into the car from the exhaust pipe.

The driver, a 31-year-old Baltimorean, was slumped unconscious over the wheel. His date, Hazel Jamieson, 23, of Baltimore, stood outside in a daze.

Trooper Leo Sullivan took them to a Bel Air physician for treatment. He then placed the driver, identified as John Prez, under arrest for investigation.

The girl was allowed to go home after she was fully recovered. State police at Benson said she told them she had been dating the man for three years—but had but that he had no intention of being "trying to break away for killing the girl."

BUILT LIKE A BATTLESHIP

Here is the rugged chassis of the '50 Ford. Its low, box-section frame with five cross members gives extra strength and rigidity. The advanced engineering design provides low center of gravity and unusual stability . . . two of the many reasons for Ford's luxurious big car comfort and roadability. And for power you have a choice of two great economy engines . . . the 100-h.p. V-8 or the 95-h.p. "Six."

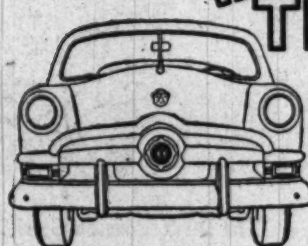

BUT WRAPPED LIKE A GIFT

You'll say this '50 Ford is outstanding for style. And the New York Fashion Academy agrees wholeheartedly with you. For the second year in a row, the Academy has awarded Ford its Gold Medal as "Fashion Car of the Year."

FORD IS THE BIG ECONOMY PACKAGE!

With its low first cost, low upkeep and high resale value Ford is the new standard of value. And here's certified proof of Ford's great gas economy! In the recent Mobilgas Grand Canyon Economy Run, officially supervised by AAA, a '50 Ford "Six" with Overdrive won the economy championship of its class—the 3 full-size cars in the low-price field.

Alexandria Divided On Election Setup

By William Smith
Post Reporter

Alexandria doesn't know for sure whether its next City Council will be elected along party lines or on a nonpartisan basis.

A new city charter, effective April 7, sets up a definite procedure for electing councilmen but opinion varies as to whether it paves the way for nonpartisan elections or "the same old Democratic landslide."

Furthermore, since the next council election is not slated until June, 1952, there's some possibility that the election laws will be altered by a new Legislature which is slated to convene five months before the election. Advocates of nonpartisan balloting already have started a campaign to have the law revised in their favor.

One Clause Decisive
Principal point of contention in the new charter was the Legislature's deletion of a single sentence which would have prohibited party primaries. This was done over the strong protest of local delegates, and in spite of the fact that Alexandria voters balloted heavily for nonpartisan elections in a special referendum last year.

By leaving primaries optional, nonpartisans say, the charter opens the way for the traditionally strong Democrats to attach their label to a specific set of candidates. This, they contend, defeats the purpose of the successful referendum for nonpartisan voting.

Under the charter, however, the Democratic primary would not nominate candidates. The party choices still would have to enter the general election by public petition—the same requirement affecting any other candidate.

Held More 'Cumbersome'

The petition procedure, while not barring party primaries, "certainly makes it more cumbersome" for political factions, according to Delegate Armistead L. Boothe, who introduced the charter bill.

If the Democrats, or any other group, should conduct a primary its candidates will have to prepare two sets of petitions—one for entry in the primary and the second for the general election. Previously, nomination in the primary was all that was required, Boothe pointed out.

Nonpartisan or independent candidates thus would have a slight advantage from the standpoint of effort expended, since they would require only the single general election petition.

District Jews Mark Birthday Of Israel State

The main ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel overflowed last night with more than 1500 Washington area Jews celebrating the second birthday of the State of Israel.

The public celebration was sponsored by the United Jewish Appeal which is seeking $2,500,000 in the Washington area this year to help the baby state. More than $1,050,000 has already been pledged, officials said.

According to the Hebrew calendar, it was two years ago Friday that the British mandate in Palestine was ended and the Jewish state came into being. The anniversary date in the Gregorian calendar is May 14.

On the eve of the termination of the mandate, Tel Aviv "had an anticipatory air, like the day before Christmas," the packed celebrants were told by Writer Quentin Reynolds, who was in Tel Aviv for the historic occasion.

"The kind of pioneers we learned about as kids," he said, are the kind of pioneers who built Israel out of that "miserable desert."

Reynolds compared the birthday celebration in the huge ballroom to its austere counterparts in present-day Israel, where, he said, "at least 50,000 new citizens are sleeping on the beaches between Haifa and Tel Aviv," because of the paucity of housing.

Another speaker, Rabbi Solomon H. Metz, said the miracle of Israel is still going on in the struggle to "keep the doors open to the disinherited."

"We have an opportunity to take part in completing the miracle," Rabbi Metz said. "It's up to us to help our brave brethren in Israel to provide homes and opportunities for work."

Louis Spiegler, executive director of the UJA campaign who presided at the gathering, read a message from Eliahu Elath, Israeli Ambassador to this country, in which Elath said the burden of caring for incoming refugees until they have been absorbed in the economic life of Israel, cannot be borne by Israel alone.

Slain Lawyer's Body En Route to D. C.

Nassau, Bahamas, April 23 (AP).—The body of woman lawyer Bettie Renner was shipped home to the United States today for burial while police still were checking the possibility of rape in her slaying.

An autopsy report failed to note evidence of criminal assault, but Police Commissioner G. H. Ranee said he "very definitely" was continuing to investigate the possibility anyway.

The body of the 37-year-old Washington attorney, stripped except for a brassiere, was believed to have been partially submerged in a limestone quarry well 24 hours before it was found Wednesday.

In the water, police also found the blood-stained slacks Miss Renner wore Tuesday when she started on a bicycle tour.

Authorities said Miss Renner's body is scheduled to arrive at Miami tomorrow about 10 or 11 a. m. (EST) aboard the motor vessel FS-41.

Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery at Washington, D. C., Wednesday. Miss Renner was an attorney with a Washington law firm. She came to Nassau on a vacation.

D. C. Exams For Service Schools Hit

District School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning yesterday said a close study was being made of recent criticisms of examinations taken by applicants for appointments to West Point and the Naval Academy.

Rear Admiral J. L. Holloway, Jr., superintendent of the Naval Academy, has notified the District Commissioners that the exams in physics were unsatisfactory, and those in English and history were "a bit difficult" for the amount of time allowed.

Admiral Holloway's action was in response to queries by the Commissioners who were concerned over the low grades achieved by the applicants. The highest grade on the last exam was 67.5 per cent. Officials of West Point found nothing to criticize in the same exams.

The examinations are arranged by District school authorities in behalf of the District Commissioners, who make the appointments.

Dr. Corning said yesterday that candidates do not fail or pass the exams but are ranked according to comparative grades scored.

The severity of the exams is thus not too significant, he said, but his staff is studying the criticism closely and will soon submit a report to the Board of Education.

Acheson Hits Back

Secretary Acheson has at last given voice to the righteous indignation which Senator McCarthy's traducing of the State Department has long called for. Mr. Acheson described his remarks to the American Society of Newspaper Editors on Saturday night as not a defense but an offense, and he was right. They were devastating. Without once mentioning Mr. McCarthy by name, he dwelt tellingly on the damage done by the defamation of men and women who, cleared by rigorous loyalty procedure, are spearheading this country in time of great international stress. He likened the McCarthy technique to the notion that by pulling all the fire alarm boxes in a city, someone may possibly turn up a fire. There was an answer to those who have objected to Mr. Acheson's intellectual austerity; his counterattack was intellectual, but it also was spirited, and no one could have missed the warmth of his feeling in attesting to the integrity of subordinates.

Mr. Acheson addressed his remarks to the same editors who several nights earlier had applauded Senator McCarthy when he complained of vilification. It was possible to gather from the audience reaction that many of the editors were jolted considerably when Mr. Acheson asked sympathy, not for himself, but for the newspapermen who are unwilling parties to the McCarthy broadsides. How to determine objectively what is news without feeding the publicity lust of the headline hunters is, of course, one of the constant dilemmas of the profession. The very fact that Mr. Acheson made his remarks before 500 or more of the persons whose job it is to disseminate the McCarthy attacks shows the lack of judgment behind the initial decision that the talk would be off the record.

We earnestly hope with Mr. Acheson that, to use his expressive phrase, he will not have to mention this "filthy mess" again. If he will continue to stand up the way he did Saturday, he may not have to.

Below The Belt

The House Committee on Lobbying Activities, was diverted from its inquiry into the activities of the real estate lobby last Wednesday by a discussion of the political philosophy of the executive vice president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, Herbert U. Nelson. The committee member who read excerpts from a letter taken from Mr. Nelson's private files was certainly hitting below the belt by introducing this irrelevant material. Mr. Nelson's lack of belief in democracy, his conviction that "it stinks," will unquestionably make him extremely unpopular with the public, including many members of the lobbying group that he represents. However, his pre-Jacksonian distrust of Government by the people does not affect his usefulness as a lobbyist or reflect on his personal integrity.

We strongly suspect that Mr. Nelson's experiences as a lobbyist account for his anti-democratic views. If legislators were not responsible to the people who elect them to office (including the bothersome women whose enfranchisement Mr. Nelson deplores), or if the privilege of voting were restricted to direct taxpayers, as Mr. Nelson desires, real estate lobbyists would have a much easier time. Congress, representing the propertied interests, would be more sympathetic toward demands for abolition of rent controls. State Legislatures and municipal governments would yield more readily to pressure to reduce real property taxes and shift tax burdens to the voteless masses in the form of excises. However, the real estate lobby would not need to spend $130,000 to influence legislation, and Mr. Nelson might find himself out of a job or living on a much smaller salary with a meager expense account.

Cutting Into Bone

If the Federal Government's contribution to the District budget were anywhere near equitable, there might be some justification for the 10 percent cut voted by the House. Certainly the Federal expenditures toward upkeep of the District government ought not to be exempt from the scrutiny of the economists. The trouble is, however, that the Federal payment to the District of 12 million dollars is already far below any standards of fairness and reason. Further "economy" here would merely impair more drastically the operations of a government continually harassed by an inadequate revenue base.

The fact is that the District government can collect real estate taxes on only 48.5 percent of the land in Washington. The Federal Government owns no less than 42.3 percent of all land here; the District government owns 3.4 percent; and nontaxable churches and hospitals account for another 5.8 percent. The 48.5 percent of the land which is taxed will produce this fiscal year an estimated $35,192,808. A conservative estimate is that the land owned by the Federal Government, if taxed fairly, would produce at least 17 million dollars more.

Under these conditions, to talk of cutting the 12-million-dollar Federal payment—less than one tenth the 119-million-dollar District budget—is to compound what is already a rank injustice. The Federation of Citizens Associations and similar groups which have taken up the cudgels in this matter deserve encouragement in their efforts to bring the facts home to Congress. Representatives Bates, Smith, Stockman and Yates—men familiar with the District's fiscal plight—took a commendable stand against the cut initiated by Representative Taber. The House still has a chance to reverse itself when it reconsiders the action taken in committee of the whole. In all justice it ought to do so. There seems to be little prospect at this time of increasing the Federal payment to a fair level, but the least Congress can do is refrain from tampering with the existing rate.

Provocation Campaign

A piling up of incidents has quickened the tempo of the cold war. The insipid Moscow note, rejecting as "absurd" the American claim for compensation for the losses suffered in the recent Baltic incident, is indicative of the Kremlin's belligerent mood. The new tension in Berlin and the closing of the American Information Service libraries in Czechoslovakia warn us that provocation on many fronts may be expected. Yet the nature of the cold war has not changed. The masters of the Kremlin are still probing for weaknesses in the free world, with the object of extending their domination. But, of course, they still respect unity and strength among their foes wherever it is unmistakably demonstrated. The threat in Berlin is typical. Moscow is planning to send 500,000 Communist demonstrators into West Berlin on May 27-30 to terrorize the population and the Western occupying powers. As in the case of the blockade last year, the aim is to drive the Allied occupying forces out of the former German capital. But the Allies have no intention of yielding to such intimidation. The State Department has let it be known that Communist demonstrators who attempt to cross the line will be met by tear gas and fire hoses, and, if these are not effective, by machine-gun fire. There is no alternative to this policy. Aggression cannot be allowed to succeed. But the very fact that the Western powers are ready to act with courage and firmness will, in all probability, prevent the invasion from taking place.

It is good to see that the United States is also making the satellite powers feel the consequences of their adherence to Moscow's dictation. The American libraries in Czechoslovakia had been a sort of window through the iron curtain affording glimpses of the free world to a limited number of Czechs in physical and intellectual slavery. For that reason only Moscow regarded them as a menace and forced them to be closed, and the State Department quickly retaliated by asking Czechoslovakia to give up its consulate at Chicago.

For a long time the United States suffered indignities, unfair treatment and misrepresentation of its policy without striking back. But the insolence and intolerance of the Muscovites know no bounds. Bitter experience has taught this country that it cannot give freedom for repression. If the puppet governments in the satellite states are afraid of the normal friendly relations between peoples, there is no alternative to reducing relations to a minimum—on a reciprocal basis.

The people of the free world must be prepared for an increase of hostile incidents and still more restricted relations between the East and the West. Moscow is forcing the issue. As Secretary Acheson said on Saturday night, "There is no quick or easy way to subdue an evil force. There is no miracle that will make it disappear from the earth." It can be dealt with only by calm nerves, iron determination to protect our free way of life and the subordination of all lesser aims to the objective of unity and strength in meeting this threat.

AEC Salaries

It is one of the unhappy anomalies of the Government's salary schedule that members of the Atomic Energy Commission receive smaller stipends than the heads of the regular Federal departments. They were forgotten men when Congress last year approved pay increases for most top-level officeholders. Senator Brien McMahon, chairman of the Congressional Atomic Energy Commission, has spoken out for correction of the inequity. We hope that Congress will act promptly to provide a salary raise that is both deserved and needed.

It is deserved because the AEC is a mammoth business enterprise, requiring executive ability of a type that could readily command a very large remuneration in private industry. The responsibilities shouldered by the commissioners and the general manager of the AEC, operating as they do a four-billion-dollar enterprise, are tremendous ones, at least on a parity with those of Cabinet officers. The salary raise is needed in order to give the positions a status that will attract men of the requisite caliber. This is not to say that high salaries are necessary to bring men of high caliber into the public service. It is to say simply that men who do undertake to serve the public ought to be accorded compensation in accordance with their rank and responsibility. The chairman of the AEC now receives $17,500 annually, the commission members and the general manager, $15,000. Senator McMahon proposes that these stipends be increased to $22,500 for the chairman—the sum fixed for Cabinet officers—and $20,000 for the commissioners and general manager. This would do no more than bring them back to the parity with Cabinet positions that Congress originally intended them to have. "The AEC commissioners are the only high Federal officers expressly forbidden by law to 'engage in any other business, vocation or employment,'" Senator McMahon pointed out, "and, therefore, an adequate salary is particularly indicated."

Sesquicentennial

It was just 150 years ago that Congress, still meeting at Philadelphia, appropriated $5000 to establish a library useful to members of the Government, and particularly the legislative branch. Part of the money was to be spent for the purchase of appropriate books and documents, part of it to furnish quarters in the first (or Senate) wing of the new Capitol Building at the new seat of Government at Washington. Thus the history of the Library of Congress and of Washington as the Capital City are virtually concurrent.

The Library of Congress was not conceived as a great state library on the model of the Bibliotheque Royale (renamed by the French Revolutionists Bibliotheque Nationale) which had been built up over centuries by the kings of France, or the British Museum, which under generous subsidies from Parliament, had become one of the richest repositories in the world. The Library of Congress was intended purely for what is called nowadays "legislative reference," and doubtless most of the 964 volumes entered in its first catalogue were chosen with only that purpose in mind.

Legislative reference is still, of course, the primary, though not indeed the most important function. The beginning of the transformation into one of the three great national libraries of modern times seems to have been the result of an historical accident. When the British burned the Capitol in 1814 most of the collection was burned with it. It was then that Mr. Jefferson offered the Nation his private library, a vast one for those times. Since Mr. Jefferson's interests covered almost every subject the character of the library was subtly changed by his gift.

But the great metamorphosis was to come under the librarianship of Dr. Herbert Putnam, which corresponds approximately to the first four decades after the removal of the library to its own tremendous and ornate edifice. Dr. Putnam, in addition to his administrative talents, possessed the genius to communicate both to Congress and to private collectors his vision of what a great national library could be and ought to be. It is thanks mainly to his imagination and energy that Washington is now—counting the Folger Shakespeare Library, the Surgeon General's Medical Library, and some other collections—probably the greatest library center on earth, offering rich opportunities for research to students in almost every field.

The story of the Library of Congress' first 150 years is told, however, much better than we can tell it here in the Sesquicentennial exhibition that is to be opened there today.

Excise Tax Cuts

The Budget Bureau has sharply reduced its estimate of 1951 revenue receipts. Now it forecasts a deficit of 6.2 billion dollars for the next fiscal year—an increase of 1.1 billion dollars over its January estimate. The congressional staff of tax experts is more pessimistic; it predicts a deficit of 7.3 billion. The House is debating the omnibus appropriation bill which calls for reductions in expenditures of about a billion dollars. Even if these cuts are approved (and are not subsequently offset by additional unbudgeted expenditures), the deficit will be slightly above the original Budget Bureau estimate of 5.1 billion dollars, if its revised estimate proves to be accurate.

Despite this dismal outlook, the Ways and Means Committee has already tentatively approved reductions in excise taxes that yield 335 million dollars in revenue. And further cuts are said to be in prospect—cuts that would reduce total receipts from the excise taxes by more than a billion dollars. It is generally agreed that wartime excise taxes are discriminatory and restrict sales of taxed products. They should be abolished as soon as possible, which means as soon as the Government can afford to dispense with the revenue produced by these taxes. Under present conditions, however, there is no justification for sweeping immediate reductions on the scale contemplated by the Ways and Means Committee.

President Truman recommended excise tax reductions that would result in revenue losses of about 650 million dollars. But he served notice on Congress that he would veto any bill that did not provide for replacement of those losses. The Ways and Means Committee might recoup some lost revenue by plugging a few tax loopholes and possibly by increases in corporation, inheritance, and gift taxes. But it is safe to say that it will not find enough additional revenue to offset losses of a billion dollars. In our opinion, it is inexorably irresponsible for the Ways and Means Committee to sponsor a major tax reduction program at a time when the Government's fiscal position is steadily deteriorating. Until expenditures have been cut sufficiently to balance the budget or at least greatly reduce the deficit, Congress would be inviting disaster by voting for tax reductions entailing a substantial loss of needed revenue.

Taxing Travel Expenses

I ask your indulgence to contradict your statements about Government allowances for travel in an editorial of April 10. There can be no reasonable claim that Government travel allowances are now less than ample. It is still possible to get a good hotel room for $5 (even in Washington), and to breakfast and lunch fairly well at $1 per meal and to dine for $2. Thus the $9 per diem will cover reasonable costs of food and lodging. There are other personal expenses which are increased or additional when in travel status. Laundry is an example, and it seems reasonable that expenses for diversion should be increased when away from home. However, the cost of food at home is substantial, and a daily saving of about $2 seems probable. That should easily cover such small items, including an occasional movie and perhaps a long-distance phone call to those at home. Also, the cost of lodging can often be reduced by sharing. I write from experience. In 134½ days in travel status during 1948 and early 1949, at $6 per diem, my profit was $80 (partly because accommodations were very cheap, both ways, at several points I had to visit). Since the per diem was raised to $9, 33 days yielded a profit of $70. My income tax returns show corresponding entries.

Though the per diem allowance is now ample, there are other aspects of official travel which are inequitable. Sometimes a trip is made on such short notice that accommodations cannot be obtained at reasonable rates. The annual cost should not fall upon the traveler. There are many rules and regulations which fully deserve to be called niggardly. One requires the employee to travel on his own time (though not exclusively so). Thus, if temporary duty is finished at 5 p. m. Friday, he must take the first available transportation back to his regular station. Another is that an employee who takes annual leave on Friday or Monday while in travel status may not receive per diem for Saturday or Sunday. Such rules are seriously damaging to morale, and make only a negligible contribution to the great savings occasionally reported by the Comptroller General.

FEPC Bill

I note that in a recent article your Mr. Albright discusses the confusion in relation to the handling of the so-called FEPC bill, about which there is more hypocrisy, along with the other so-called civil rights bills such as the polltax. I wish it were possible, when such legislation is up for consideration and vote that a systolic blood pressure deceptive test machine could be attached to each person having to deal with or act on it. If that were done, and votes registered accordingly, there would not be 10 percent of them for such items. How any decent lawyer can contend and vote for such as the poll tax bill is utterly incomprehensible, for such a lawyer must know that such "qualifications" have been employed from time immemorial, and were employed by the colonists and most of the States. He must know that taxpaying, in various forms, has always been used, here and there, throughout the whole world, as a qualification element. He ought to know that the Constitutional Convention seriously considered making property holding to the amount of $100,000 a qualification of the Presidency, and I am not sure that that would not have been a good thing. A similar provision was considered for members of the Congress and the courts, and I am not sure that that would not have been a good thing.

Homes For Negroes

Take a ride through Arlington and Fairfax in Virginia, Prince Georges and Montgomery counties in Maryland amid the maze of cars any weekend and find a housing development, among the thousands of mushrooming properties, that will sell one house to a Negro. The white buyers of property in these outlying regions are "converting" their old 10-50-year District homes to Negro buyers for an average $3000 above the selling price to whites. They are in need of repairs and require $2000-$4000 down.

But I earn between $50-$80 weekly, and I want a three-bedroom house with sliding-door closets, a kitchen full of closets and electrical wizardry. Your paper and radio have educated my tastes and thrift enough to see the advantages of the modern postwar house in comparison with these conversions. I am exploited by my own realtors who go into these "conversion areas" and offer whites too high prices knowing that I can meet the prices in our present false economy. They acknowledge that I have the same dollar to spend.

Mr. Editor, why not let me know the attitude of the realty groups, the contractors, and FHA toward financing a house for a Negro? Who will sell land, not off the path of civilization, accessible to all facilities, with paved streets, schools, etc., to Negroes? Where?

Destruction of Austria-Hungary

On the occasion of the centenary of Thomas Masaryk's birth many harsh things have been written about the old Hapsburg Empire. Is it not time that these diverse opinions should be revised in a spirit of judicial detachment and impartiality? There has never yet been a country where everybody was happy, but nowhere did people live a happier life than in the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy, at least during the 30 years preceding 1914. Nowhere did people go more cheerfully to their daily work than in the realm of the Hapsburgs, where nobody went hungry. Smile and songs were on the people's lips. Everybody, without distinction of class, race, nationality, or creed, had an equal opportunity to raise himself to a materially, culturally, and socially improved position, and the number of those who did so raised themselves increased from year to year. Public administration was sound and efficient and the judiciary was impartial and incorruptible. The general level of culture was high.

The destruction of Austria-Hungary as a political, and still more as an economic unit, with its single-currency system, its free enterprise, and the free movement of its citizens and their products throughout a territory larger than Germany or France, must be attributed to lack of knowledge and statesmanship on the part of Woodrow Wilson, Lloyd George, and Clemenceau.

They deliberately perpetrated, or at any rate sanctioned, the destruction of the monarchy when it was in their power, by the exercise of wise statesmanship, to have averted such a catastrophe. There is little doubt that, had they risen to the full measure of their responsibilities, central Europe would have been saved and history would have taken an entirely different course. It is not too much even to assert that the second world war might have been averted. It is true that Masaryk and his followers created a small new state; but at the cost of destroying a large old one and of

Being Realists

BELGRADE, YUGOSLAVIA—There is no better illustration of the sudden extension of American world responsibility than a simple and perhaps troublesome fact that is visible here. The official American policy, of keeping this small distant and rather unhappy country going on a hand-to-mouth basis, is no longer practical.

In brief, two things have happened that urgently demand the development of a new American policy toward Yugoslavia. Despite occasional, rather grudging loans from the Export-Import and World Banks, the Yugoslav foreign exchange position has steadily grown more and more grave. At this moment, by all the signs, the Yugoslav government must quickly receive further hard currency credits in order to avoid the alternative disasters of abandoning the five-year plan or increasing the cruel sacrifices of the masses.

In the eyes of Marshal Tito and the men around him, abandonment of Yugoslavia's five-year plan is almost unthinkable. To weaken this effort of national development would be to impair the country's power to resist Soviet aggression. It would also weaken the hold of the leadership on the rank and file of the Yugoslav Communist Party. In short, this would be an act suggesting that neither the Communist was right after all, which cannot be considered.

Matter of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

AT THE SAME TIME, the changes in Yugoslavia, already reported in this space, have made Marshal Tito and the men around him even more reluctant to demand further sacrifices from the Yugoslav people. Because Yugoslavia is evolving in an un-Soviet direction, they want to lighten the pressure, not increase it. This is why an important member of the Yugoslav inner circle, Vladimir Popovic, is being sent to the United States to get the needed additional credits, including even credits for consumer goods. At a guess, what the Yugoslav leaders really want is enough cash to tide them over the present emergency, plus a long-range understanding with the United States, and a resulting quantity of adequate annual aid over a reasonable period. In the present context, "adequate" aid for Yugoslavia ought probably to be defined as about 150 million dollars a year for five years. It is urgent to understand two aspects of this new issue that will shortly confront our policymakers. First, our relations with Yugoslavia, still astonishingly delicate, Tito and the men around him have obviously begun to question their former religious faith in the universal wickedness of the West. But even the slightest stimulus, such as a recent episode involving the American and British ambassadors here, is enough to cause all the old indoctrinated Communist suspicions to come rushing back. Thus if Yugoslavia is refused the help that is now urgently needed, this American failure, although merely indicative of the clumsiness of our Government, will be taken in Belgrade as evidence of evil intentions. It will be thought that Washington wants to do Belgrade in. As for any overt attempt to interfere in Yugoslavia's internal politics, demanding concessions as the price of aid, this will provoke an instantaneous and most damaging explosion.

THE YUGOSLAV attitude may seem, and indeed is, quite unreasonable. But accepting and dealing with unreasonableness as a temporarily unchallengeable fact, is one of the prices of having relations with people who are religious about politics. In the second place, the question remains whether a strong policy of aid in Yugoslavia is worth the inherent trouble and expense. The answer of this correspondent would be that from the hard, realistic standpoint, there could be no better investment, either of the energies of our diplomats, or of the funds we are devoting to the cold war.

Yugoslavia has 30 fighting divisions—at this moment immeasurably the largest and best army in Europe outside the Soviet sphere. This country is in a strategic position of the first importance. Whereas western European governments may be tempted to appease the Kremlin, any such deal that has Tito and Stalin are out of the question—if only because Tito knows that the day he puts his hand in Stalin's, he will be dragged off to the executioner. Strategically, in sum, Yugoslavia is a remarkable bargain, offering $2 of return for every $1 invested. In the long run, moreover, Yugoslavia's political importance may prove even greater than Yugoslavia's strategic importance. As previously reported in this space, the aim of the Yugoslav leaders is to evolve toward a thorough socialism without compulsion. Any such evolution is impossible without generous financing. It may prove to be impossible in any case, since a state that has Tito resorted to police methods finds them always hard to abandon. Yet a conspicuously successful Yugoslavia can both liberate the western Communist Parties from the Kremlin and deeply shake the loyalty of the eastern European satellites. These would be gains beyond price. In short, an investment in Yugoslavia at this time is a sure thing strategically and a political gamble that may pay the most generous dark horse odds. No sensible man who is interested in winning the cold war could ask for better.

The Baltic Affair

THERE are reasons for thinking that the shooting down of the Navy plane in the Baltic was not a local incident brought on by a local commander but that it was an act of Soviet policy. The known facts indicate that the Soviet intelligence had advance notice that the plane would fly a course over the Baltic Sea, that though it was known to be unarmed the Soviet intelligence believed it carried important electronic equipment, and that orders were given to the Soviet fighter command to intercept it, to capture it if possible, and failing that, to shoot it down into the sea and destroy all traces of it.

THE AMERICAN evidence is as conclusive as proof can be—since the crew had disappeared—that the plane was not intercepted over Latvian territory. The evidence is, first, that the plane was too slow to have gotten there intentionally or by mistake; and second, that no American commander would have sent such a plane on such a dangerous mission. If, when, and as the American command were reconnoitering the Soviet military establishments on the Baltic coast, it would use a plane of a wholly different type.

It is virtually certain, therefore, that the action took place over the sea and not over land, and that the Soviet original charge was untrue. The probabilities are very high that he knew it was untrue. For he would hardly have dared to say that "the American plane turned toward the sea and disappeared" if there had been any chance that the plane itself or any of its crew could have returned to the American lines and testified as to what happened.

Either the Soviet fighters must have reported seeing the complete destruction and disappearance of the plane well outside Soviet territorial waters, or, and less probably, the plane was captured and the Soviet authorities do not wish us to know that they have the secrets which possession of the plane would give them. The probabilities, however, are that they did not capture the plane and that they saw it destroyed completely. For retrieving a wrecked plane out in the open sea would be an operation hard to hide. If, on the other hand, the plane had come down in Soviet waters, the Soviet authorities could have produced some of the wreckage to prove that the plane had violated Soviet territory, and the temptation to prove that we had acted illegally and provocatively would have been hard to resist. Therefore it is reasonable to conclude that Vishinsky was sure that the plane and the crew had disappeared completely out in the Baltic. Otherwise he could not have risked our finding pieces of the wreckage or our rescuing the crew and thus proving conclusively that the plane was destroyed outside Russian territory.

THE OSTENTATIOUS award of the "Order of the Red Banner" to four Soviet flying officers was plainly intended to advertise the exploit. The award is particularly significant, it seems to me, because these officers did not in fact succeed in doing what, according to M. Vishinsky, they tried to do. He says they tried to capture the plane by making it land in Latvia. He says that they did not do that. Failing the capture of the plane, the Soviet fighters ought to have been able to shoot it down within Soviet territory. M. Vishinsky says that they did not do that either. What then did these fighters do that entitled them to special honors and decorations?

What they did then was to reach out beyond the Soviet territory and knock down an American plane which the Soviet authorities then chose to have the people believe was one of the famous and dreaded—though obsolete—B-29's. The plane was not in fact a B-29. But the decorations were given as if the Red fighters had destroyed a B-29. All this adds up to the conclusion that the Soviet government set up the exploit with two objectives: one, which probably failed, was to capture a plane with valuable military secrets; the other was to demonstrate to the world that the Soviet air defenses are able to repel American strategic airpower.

THERE are several hypotheses as to what are the over-all military intentions of the Soviet Union. This affair lends considerable weight to the view that the Russians are intent first of all upon making their own territory invulnerable to American airpower. If they could make it invulnerable, then the Red army would be virtually unopposed around the periphery of the Soviet Union. This Baltic incident is meant, I believe, to convince the Russian people and also the people of Europe that the Soviet Union has achieved an air defense.

IT IS significant that the incident was precipitated after The Hague conference of the Atlantic nations had disclosed the enormous difficulty of creating a European army, before the meeting of the Foreign Ministers in London where they must wrestle with these difficulties, and just as the situation in Germany and around Yugoslavia and at Trieste is boiling up.

An incident which deflates the military value of American airpower in the eyes of the Europeans would be a diplomatic success for the Kremlin, and would be well worth some medals and an exchange of angry diplomatic notes.

KNOW YOUR WATERWAYS

Waterways and Industry

The value of waterways has increased tremendously in recent years owing to the great improvement in the equipment used and the increased depths and widths of channels. When the International Harvester Company built a $44,000,000 plant to employ 6,000 persons in the St. Louis area, a principal consideration was that the site is on a good waterway. Mr. Fowler McCormick, Chairman of the Harvester Company board, stated: "We have learned in our foreign manufacturing experience of the importance of waterways. . . I sometimes wonder if we in this country in manufacturing industries appreciate the value of waterways to industries as we should." The December 1945 issue of The American Rolling Mill Co.'s "Facts and Figures" included this statement: "The location of Arco plants makes feasible the use of much economical water transportation: The Great Lakes for the movement of ore; and the Ohio, Mississippi, and Missouri Rivers, and the Houston ship canal for the movement of steel, coal, and other materials between plants and to various markets."

aware that such a plan could scarcely be taken to Congress, and if it were, that Congress would not accept it.

The main purpose of the paper, therefore, may be to illustrate that the sterling balance problem can be eased only as it becomes a part of a much broader design for aid to Southeast Asia.

Tied to Broader Decision

It is pointed out that even if India were not a British creditor, the United Kingdom would still have to give it economic aid. In fact, there are no sterling balances in Burma, and yet Britain is giving it substantial financial help.

The implications of the British proposal, therefore, are that there must be a joint American-U.K.-Commonwealth Nations decision on what sort of economic help must be given to the nations in Asia now threatened with Communist engulfment.

This in turn, implies an even broader decision on what sort of a strategic and political policy must be adopted, and whether or not a determination should be made to build in Asia a wall against further Russian aggression, similar to that built by the Marshall Plan in western Europe.

Once such a decision was made, the next step would be to determine the amount of aid needed, the type, and the sources whence it would come.

Then, and as part of that process, the problem of reducing the sterling balances might be handled, officials believe.

Limit to Amount Needed

Some Administration economists feel the amount of aid needed—at least, of a nonmilitary kind—would be relatively small compared to that of the Marshall Plan.

They believe that anything more than 300 million dollars a year of nonmilitary assistance could not be absorbed by the critical countries concerned—Indo-China, Burma, Thailand, India, Pakistan and Indonesia—plus perhaps about the same amount for Japan, which the U. S. is already providing.

But, as distinct from the Marshall Plan, it would appear that such aid might have to run over a period of more than four years. Possibly it would have to continue for as long as 10 to 15 years.

The British proposal on the sterling balances, plus the reports of Southeast Asia by Ambassador-at-Large Philip C. Jessup, plus current reports coming in from a State Department mission now on the scene, may all contribute to and force the framing of a broad political, strategic and economic plan for the area within the next several months.

What's the STRENGTH of a Bank?

Just as an aeronautical engineer has his methods of rating strength, so a corporation treasurer knows how to size up the financial strength of a bank from its balance sheet. We hope all treasurers will study ours.

But there's more to a bank than a balance sheet can show. For instance, we recognize an obligation to make bank service increasingly useful to the people of Washington. We believe there's room in banking for vision and imagination, and these, too, can be factors of strength.

Our concept of bank service expresses itself in our efforts to encourage business and industry by finding speedy and helpful answers to their problems; in our efforts to promote general employment by making loans for constructive commercial and individual purposes.

In short, our aim is to give banking service over and beyond the routine. If that's what your business needs, why don't you ask for it . . . at the Union Trust?

U. S. Considers Action to Delay Rail Walkout

and-fireman locomotive crew whenever the diesel engine is used. Their chief argument has been that the complexity of the diesel locomotive required the extra engineer and/or fireman for safety's sake.

Argument Rejected

This argument was rejected early this year for both unions by an emergency board set up by President Truman under the Railway Labor Act's strike-delay provisions. The board recommendations, however, are not binding, and 30 days after its report, each of the brotherhoods was eligible to call a strike to win its demands.

As it turned out, the more conservative of the two unions—the firemen—has called the strike.

The militant engineers, who participated in a nationwide walkout with the trainmen and switchmen and tied up the Nation's rail system for three days in 1946, apparently are sitting this one out.

Some observers believe the Brotherhood of Firemen rushed to the forefront of this particular fight in order to "show up" the Brotherhood of Engineers.

In the locomotive cab, it's the engineer who gives the fireman orders. Furthermore, an engineer is a man who has graduated from the ranks of fireman. Again, in the past year or so, it was the engineers who rejected a proposed merger of the two brotherhoods after the proposal had been accepted by the firemen.

At any rate, the feeling between the two brotherhoods is hardly one of good will. The strained relations were demonstrated last week when the engineers' brotherhood announced its members would not be ordered to respect the picket lines of the firemen.

Against 7 Roads

Wednesday's strike of the firemen is directed at only seven roads—apparently to avert a national crisis and drastic action by President Truman.

In 1946, when the engineers, trainmen and switchmen walked out in an effort to win higher wages, President Truman broke the strike by asking Congress for the power to draft the strikers into the armed forces.

Strategy of the firemen is to avert a Nation-wide tieup, even though more than half of the States will directly feel the effects of the strike should the trains stop running—as they probably will.

The struck lines will include the Pennsylvania west of Harrisburg, Pa.; the Aitchison, Topeka & Santa Fe; the Southern Railway; the New York Central west of Buffalo, plus three of its divisions—the Michigan Central west of the Detroit River, the Big Four and the Ohio Central lines.

Meanwhile, other rail labor relations disputes are going through the mill of procedure fixed by the national Railway Labor Act.

The Order of Railway Conductors, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, Switchmen's Union, and Railroad Yardmasters of America are all seeking a 40-hour week for yard service without reduction in the pay they presently get for a 48-hour week. These cases are currently being dealt with by an under conciliation by the National operate the Pullman cars and emergency board. All of the 16 Mediation Board. Employer in this whose stock is owned by 52 rail-nonoperating rail unions got this dispute is the Pullman Co., which roads.

Another dispute, involving the demand of Pullman conductors for a reduction in the work month from 225 to 210 hours, is presently benefit last year.

Feather-bedding scheme of Firemen's Union to put an additional fireman on diesel locomotives has been CONSIDERED TWICE!

Fact Finding Boards appointed by Presidents Roosevelt and Truman have said these demands were "devoid of merit" and they were REJECTED TWICE!

Now the Firemen's leaders seek to paralyze railroad transportation to compel the railroads to employ a wholly unnecessary additional fireman to ride on diesel locomotives. This scheme is plain

FEATHER-BEDDING!

LEADERS OF the Firemen's union have called a nation-wide strike starting with four great railroads on April 26. These railroads are the New York Central, Pennsylvania, Santa Fe, and Southern.

The union claim that a second fireman is needed on grounds of safety is sheer hypocrisy. Safety has been dragged into this dispute only in an unsuccessful effort to give a cloak of respectability to vicious feather-bedding demands.

After a careful study of the first demands of this union, a Presidential Fact Finding Board on May 21, 1943, reported to President Roosevelt that there was no need for an extra fireman on diesel locomotives.

Again, on September 19, 1949, after a second hearing on the union leaders' demands, a second Board reported to President Truman that: "there presently exists no need for an additional fireman... upon either the ground of safety or that of efficiency and economy of operation."

Safety Record of Diesels is Outstandingly Good
Although the railroads accepted the Board findings, the union leaders have brazenly rejected them. They represent that an extra fireman is needed for "safety" reasons. Here's what the Board had to say on that point:

"The safety and on-time performance of diesel-electric locomotives operated under current rules have been notably good..."

"Upon careful analysis of the data submitted on safety, we have concluded that no valid reasons have been shown as a support for the Brotherhood proposal under which a fireman would be required to be at all times continuously in the cab of road diesels. The proposal must be rejected."

The real reason behind these demands is that the union leaders are trying to make jobs where there is no work. In other words, a plain case of "feather-bedding."

The railroads have no intention of yielding to these wasteful make-work demands.

"The Safety Record of Diesels is Outstandingly Good..."

—Presidential Fact Finding Board Report

Read these excerpts from official reports of Presidential Fact Finding Boards:

"The safety record of Diesels is outstandingly good, and it follows that the safety rules now applicable have produced good results."

"The safety and on-time performance of Diesel-electric locomotives operated under current rules indicate that Diesel-electric operation has been safer than steam locomotive operation..."

Remember! These are not statements of the railroads. They are just a few of the many similar conclusions reached by President Truman's Fact Finding Board which spent months investigating the claims of the union leaders.

We are publishing this and other advertisements to talk to you at first hand about matters which are important to everybody.

Hawkins Ends Demaret's Streak in Specialists Golf

Beginners' Bargain Golf Lessons Planned

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

HOW CAN A man of modest means learn to play golf for a modest fee?

An approach to this problem will be made by Washington's public golf courses in a series of beginners' lessons.

Six 45-minute sessions, with all clubs, balls, tees and necessary materials furnished, will be held at East Potomac Golf Course in two groups, one starting about May 1 and one about June 1. Price for the course is $3.75.

Pros from each of the public courses will instruct. About 2000 embryos golfers are expected to register.

A FEW DAYS ago it was reported that Jim Vance, a former cross-handed golfer from Prince Georges, cut several strokes off his game by putting one handed while changing over to a conventional putter.

Today Jerry Harp, of East Potomac, a conventional putter, called to say he has cut several strokes off his game by putting cross handed.

Keeps him from jabbing short putts, Harp says.

BELLE HAVEN will hold an open tourney May 1, taking the place of the cancelled Quantico Open.

George Fazio, new Woodmont country club pro, will play his first local tournament in the Prince Georges Pro-Am May 1.

Russ Lombardi, physical education at McKinley Tech, teaches the schoolboys golf three days a week at Fort Dupont.

ANACOSTIA public golf course had an election of officers and William Swan was elected president. Other officers include: Glenn Taylor, vice president; Wilbur Seay, secretary; and Buck Freeman, treasurer.

BELLE HAVEN—R. R. Fisher took the handicap sweepstakes tournament with 94-28-66.

Golfing Roundup

ARMY-NAVY—Commander H. Gutekunst won the handicap with a score of 81-13-68. Lieut. Col. J. R. Hoover with 91-22-69 and Col. M. J. Asensio with 94-25-69 tied for second.

Gen. F. G. Smith won the low gross with 76. The blind draw was won by Lieut. Col. H. A. Soucy.

BELLE HAVEN—R. R. Fisher took the handicap sweepstakes tournament with 94-28-66.

TWO HOLES-IN-ONE Scored Despite Rain

Yesterday's rain didn't deter hundreds of Washington golfers and two holes-in-one were recorded.

Commander H. J. Webb racked up an ace at Washington on the eleventh hole. He used a 6 iron. The distance was 134 yards. He was playing Jack Eakin, Cliff Hunt and John Nicoll.

George Franklin shot a hole-in-one on the 6th hole of East Potomac's D Course. He used a 7 iron. The distance was 162 yards. He was playing with Mrs. Franklin and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Campbell.

Bob Bowne with 93-25-68 and R. A. Morgan with 83-15-68 tied for second.

LANGSTON—Brainerd Bellfield and Rubin Brooks tied with J. C. Precia and Dave Stroman with a par 72 in a four-hole match.

EAST POTOMAC—Yesterday's open was rained out after Ernie Garlem defeated Tracey Foust, 3 and 2, and Ted King beat R. March, 4 and 2, in the semifinals in the first flight competition.

Third flight competition was won by George Chicklock. He won over Richard Nekola, 2 and 1. Tourney directors, Frank Battista and Jack Savers, announced that finals in the first and second flights would be played next week.

Downtown merchants donated three trophies and 24 prizes for the meet. A near record crowd came out Saturday. The course was nearly full by 6:30 in the morning.

MANOR—J. E. Davidson with 88-16-72 took first in the blind bogey. Kem Spencer was second with 82-4-78.

New York, April 23 (AP)—Pitcher Joe Page of the world champion New York Yankees will receive the Babe Ruth Memorial Award at Wednesday's game here with Boston. The award is for the player voted most outstanding in last year's World Series.

W-L High Pitcher Finally Issues Walk After 10 Games

By Don Lief

An amazing baseball streak was shattered recently when Stan Monroe walked three batters as Washington-Lee High of Arlington crushed George Washington of Alexandria, 20-3, on Monroe's two-hitter.

For, in compiling a 10-win, none-lost record in 1949, Stan Monroe walked no-repeat—no men. And Monroe met the toughest teams on the W-L schedule as the Little Generals went on to win the State crown.

In the opening playoff game, Monroe posted a 5-0 shutout. He came in to protect a 5-2 margin in the final game.

Some other 1949 aspects of the Monroe arm: He didn't allow more than one run per game; went over seven innings on three occasions without allowing a hit; had three one-hitters, and averaged 14 strikeouts per game.

Stan's coach, Frank Rockwell, calls him "the best high school pitcher I've ever seen."

Texas Pro Wins Event With 69-200

Virginia Beach, Va., April 23 (AP).

Fred E. Hawkins of El Paso, Tex., won the third annual $10,000 Cavalier Specialists Open tournament here today ending the victory streak of Jimmy Demaret of Ojai, Calif.

The 26-year-old Hawkins put together rounds of 67, 64 and 69 to grab first money of $1000 in the 54-hole event with a seven-under-par total of 200.

Demaret, victor in the recent Masters and North Fulton Open tournaments, was deadlocked with the gangling fellow from Texas after they played the second round before lunch today.

But Demaret faulted this afternoon, carding a four-over-par 73 over the 6065-yard Cavalier Yacht and Country Club course and it left jocular Jimmy four strokes off the pace and in fifth place.

Clayton Heafner, the mustached veteran from Charlotte, N. C., came up with a sizzling five-below-par 64 this afternoon to gain runner-up honors with a total of 202. Three strokes behind Hawkins and deadlocked for third were Johnny Palmer of Badin, N. C., and Ted Kroil of Philmont, Pa.

Amateur honors went to Charley Price, former Kenwood Country Club champion from Washington, D. C. Price put together rounds of 70, 71 and 76 for a 34-hole total of 217.

George Fazio, of Washington's Woodmont Country Club, won $150 for his 71-67-73-211.

Doug Ford of Biarcliffe, N. Y., came in sixth with 205. Seventh went to Henry Rankin of St. Andrews, Ill., who had 206. Tied for eighth with 207 were Ed Furgul of Royal Oak, Mich.; Johnny O'Donnell, of Norfolk, Va.; Jack Burke Jr. of White Plains, N. Y.; and Norman Von Nida, the Australian who came to America to "try to improve my golf game."

Hawkins' finest round came this morning and he almost duplicated it after the lunchtime intermission. Coming up to No. 18 on his last time around, Hawkins was two below par. But he dropped his drive from the tee on this 200-yard, par-three troublemaker into the flanking waters of Link Horn Bay.

The hooked drive cost him a stroke to get out of the water and another shot to get on the velvet. Hawkins made a brilliant 25-foot putt, but the ball broke away as it lipped the cup and rolled 30 inches beyond. He took a five.

Hawkins, playing his third year on golf's big-time circuit, scored five birdies and was never over par in carving his morning 64.

THE D. C. Golf Association will hold its spring handicap mixed Scotch foursome at Columbia May 12. The deadline for entries is May 7.

The Federal Golf Association is holding a similar event at East Potomac April 29.

EAGLE: William F. Donnelly, 17th at Kenwood.

PRO AL Price says that at least three Argyle members are certain of places on the men's teams. They are Dick Mothershead, Frank Alvasta and H. M. DeVolt. Mothershead led qualifiers for the team with a 69.

JOHN JONES, B. J. Vos, Henry Cannaday, and Gordon Singhas of Alexandria claim to be the most indefatigable golfers around. This foursome hasn't missed playing golf at least once a week whenever the courses are open.

According to Vos, they've played in torrential rains and when the mercury was less than 20 degrees—so cold they had to chip ice off their irons.

Can anybody top this?

Arlington Driver Wins 'Hot-Rod' Race

Williams Grove, Pa., April 23 (AP)—Carl Anderson, Arlington, Va., today won the inaugural 25-lap "hot rod" roadster race on the half-mile Williams Grove speedway.

Anderson came in 50 feet in front of Shorty Bowers, Hagerstown, Md. Other money winners were Bob Nay, Annandale, Va., third; and Chess Wilkins, Arlington, Va., fourth.

Sore Arm Benches Reynolds for Four Days

New York, April 23 (AP)—Allie Reynolds has a sore elbow and won't be able to pitch for the New York Yankees for about four days.

The right-hander had been scheduled to start today's game with Washington, which was rained out, but complained he couldn't bend his right elbow. Dr. Sidney Gaynor diagnosed the trouble as "inflammation from a sprain."

Washington All-Stars Lose in Soccer, 5-2

Baltimore's All-Stars defeated the Washington All-Stars, 5-2, in soccer at Hughesville, Md., yesterday. In a preliminary, the Baltimore Old-Timers blanked the Washington Old-Timers, 2-0.

Fordham Coach Quits

New York, April 23 (AP)—Frank (Bo) Adams resigned today as head basketball coach at Fordham University. He said he wanted to devote more time to operation of a boys camp. He recommended Don Kennedy, a New York high school coach, as his successor.

Mrs. Crosetti Sick

New York, April 23 (AP)—Coach Frank Crosetti of the New York Yankees flew to San Francisco today to join his sick wife.

Alexander, Georgia Tech's Famous Coach, Dies in Sleep; Led Engineers for 25 Years

His Teams in All Bowls

Atlanta, April 23 (AP)—Coach W. A. Alexander, who guided top Georgia Tech teams to all the major bowls, died in his sleep today.

The 60-year-old coach, who had suffered several heart attacks the past year, was found dead in bed by his wife this morning. He had retired early, after watching a Tech scrimmage yesterday afternoon.

Deciding to take it a little easier, he stepped down as football coach at the end of the 1944 season, to be succeeded by Bobby Dodd. Alexander remained at Tech as athletic director and head of the physical education department.

Coach "Alex" had received about every football honor that could come his way. He was tapped by rival Southeastern Conference coaches for the Nashville Banner Award in 1939. He held the Stag Award, was named coach of the year in 1942 and was given the National Touchdown Club Award two years ago.

The honors came to a man who was a misfit on the gridiron and a whizz calling signals from the bench.

Back around 1908, Bill Alexander was a problem to his coach.

The late Tech mentor John Heisman once said he "didn't know what to do about Alex. He wasn't good enough to play varsity football, yet he was a loyal scrub and such a hard worker he deserved some sort of reward."

He hit on the idea of making him "captain of the scrubs," a new, spur-of-the-moment title.

The tall, skinny youngster never did make the varsity, but he played just enough, thanks to Heisman, to win his letter.

He stayed on at Tech after his graduation in 1912 to work as his coach's assistant, except for time out to serve overseas with the Artillery in World War I.

In 1920, he succeeded Heisman as head coach, a post he held for nearly 25 years.

Alexander became the first man to pilot teams in the four major bowls—Rose, Sugar, Orange and Cotton. In all, his record stood at 133 games won, 95 lost and 8 tied.

Alexander is survived by his wife, three stepdaughters and a stepson. Funeral services will be held Tuesday morning in Atlanta.

Navy Wins Dinghy Races; GW Second

Annapolis, Md., April 23 (AP)—

Navy finished ahead of sailors from six other schools today to win the qualifying races for Middle Atlantic Dinghy championships.

Paced by Bill Lephian, the Midshipmen picked up 40 points to give them a total of 101 in the two-day competition. Lephian won five out of seven races in amassing 53 points, tops in the individual scoring.

Following Navy were George Washington, 92; Princeton, 87; Stevens Institute, 61; Haverford, 57; Lafayette, 49, and Drexel, 38. All but the last two qualified for a shot at the American Cup, which goes to the winner of the finals next month.

Like the qualifying events, they will be held on the Severn River. Today's competition was held in very light shifting winds and intermittent showers over a mile-and-three-quarter course.

D. C. Fencers Win Four Places

The Washington Fencer's Club won the first four places in the divisional championships in men's foil competition held yesterday at Pierce Hall, Clarence Huellett led the sword winners with nine victories and no losses.

Clarence Huellett (W) 9-0, 2. Dan Lyons (W) 7-2 (22 touches), 3. John McVey (W) 7-2 (31 touches), 4. Colonel J. Hayes (W) 7-2 (31 touches), 5. Lewis E. Huellett (U) 6-3 (26 touches), 6. George Reynolds (26 touches), 7. Lewis Buntis (YMCA) 3-7.

Breeders Stakes Tops 'Graw Slate'

12 Expected In Race for Md. Foals

By Walter Hight
Post Reporter

Three more days of thoroughbred competition remain at Havre de Grace before the curtain is run down on this 16-day meeting on Wednesday.

Thursday and Friday Charles Town will have the area's sport to itself. On Saturday, Pimlico opens unopposed by Charles Town.

One more stake event on the Graw schedule is the Breeders Stakes, which will headline the final program on Wednesday.

It is a dash of four furlongs for Maryland-bred 2-year-olds and indications point to a field of at least a dozen. The race has an endowment of $5000 added.

From an original list of 167 nominations to the Breeders event, numerous winners have emerged and it is likely that the stake will be a somewhat open affair in which the luck of the draw for post positions may have a great deal to do with the final placings. At four furlongs there is a short run to the turn, with inside performers having an edge of their rivals.

While it is hard to predict at this time who will be the public favorite in the race, it is certain that Walter A. Edgar's Miss President with John Gilbert in the saddle, daughter of Challedon and Politigirl impressed that day.

Arranged against her will be such juveniles as Stan Swing, Direct Time, Panade, B. Battery, Mr. Greenwood, Golden Gesture, Tom Q and Keedee, to mention a few, while the Ella K. Bryson and Alfred Guyenne Vanderbilt Stables also will be represented, although the identity of their color-bearers has not as yet been revealed.

There is also the possibility that several "unknowns" will be in the lineup, adding to the interest in the contest.

The Federal Diary by Jerry Klutts

3 Departments' Workers Pile Up Leave Worth More Than 116 Million

The 96,000 employees in three departments—State, Commerce and Justice—have piled up a total of 3,573,163 days of accumulated annual leave and 3,783,805 days of sick leave. It would cost Uncle Sam $116,814,804 to pay off leave credited to these workers.

State's 21,000 employees have by far the highest average accumulation of leave, but its Foreign Service people are entitled to 60 days of leave annually. They have 1,127,945 days of annual and 848,197 days of sick leave. Justice's 27,000 employees have 992,160 days of annual and 1,222,520 days of sick leave stored up. Commerce's 49,000 employees have 1,380,661 days of annual and 1,617,977 days of sick leave to their credit.

The leave figures on the three departments were given to the House by fair-minded Representative Karl Stefan (R., Neb.), who said in part:

"I do not advocate a decrease in the number of leave days allowed to Government employees. I merely call your attention to the fact that something will have to be done about paying up this annual leave in order that we can start each fiscal year at a more reasonable basis."

REVEALING? The quote of the week comes from Representative Bryson (D., S. C.), who said:

"Is it not a matter of fact that seldom, if ever, are negotiations started between diplomats representing our country and other countries before they get pretty well soured with booze?"

He asked the question of Representative Rees (R., Kans.), who conceded that the use of liquor by diplomats "is terribly overdone."

POLITICS? The National Civil Service League has thrown its influence behind the bottled-up Fear bill. It challenged a statement by Chairman Johnston of the Senate Postoffice and Civil Service Committee, that the Constitution requires appointment of postmasters by the President and confirmation by the Senate. The league answered in part:

"The manner in which they (the postmasters) are now selected—political acceptability first, and business ability second—lowers the value of the Postoffice Department as a business institution. The department will never be on a real business basis as long as Senate confirmation, which means political selection, decides who will be postmaster in every city in the United States."

PBS: Representative Keefe (R., Wis.) has drafted amendments to boost the budget of the Public Health Service. He's recognized as the congressional expert on the PHS, and is one of its most enthusiastic supporters.

Keefe will see three million dollars for cancer research facilities; $2,500,000 additional for mental health research; four million dollars for continuation of the heart research construction program, and the full budget as recommended by the President for hospital construction under the Hill-Burton Act. He's assured of considerable support for his amendment to the big omnibus budget bill now being debated in the House.

QUOTA SYSTEM: The State quota law is preventing hundreds of residents of this city and Maryland and Virginia from getting Federal jobs. However, most jobs here are exempt from the quota law. The latest Civil Service list of exemptions follows:

Professional and scientific jobs that pay at least $3000 to start; all jobs classified GS-14 and above; all jobs in the trades and skills; artistic and helper positions; all jobs in graphic and map reproduction arts that require trade knowledge and manual skill. Positions of operating engineer, fireman, oiler, general helper, laborer, foreman of laborers, gardener, grounds keeper, animal keeper, chauffeur, truck driver, motor vehicle dispatcher, an elevator and phone operators, and all GS-1, 2 and 3 typist and stenographer jobs until June 30. All jobs at the Government Printing Office, National Capital Housing Authority, and agency field offices here also are exempt.

In addition, veterans as a group are not subject to the State quota law.

Shrine Circus Opens Tonight...

BEHIND THE SCENES—Though they live with the circus, Mickey, 6, and Ray Hartzell, 5, sons of the Flying Hartzells, featured performers, never tire of admiring the animals. Here they watch as Caldonia, standing, and Pat Parrish, aerialists, play with baby elephant. Circus arrived yesterday from Harrisburg, Pa., and will open tonight at 8:30 at Uline Arena. Beginning Tuesday, there will be six matinees and seven evening shows. Circus will run through Sunday night.

Police Seek Five More In Dope Ring

Six Suspects Now
In Custody; 1 Free
On Bond As Police
Drive on Combine

Police and Federal agents still searched for five persons last night to complete their roundup of a $200,000-a-year narcotics ring, described as the biggest in Washington.

Moving swiftly Saturday, they arrested seven persons and charged them with violation of the Harrison Narcotics Act.

Only one of the seven—John Edward Histon, 48—was able to make bond. He was freed in $1000.

Still in custody were Fred Gray, 38; Mrs. Virginia Blevins, 31; Carrie Cole, 42; Harry Lee, 51; John Hannon Levister, 38, and William Francis Corridan, 53. In addition, two women were booked as Government witnesses. Police released three other persons after questioning them.

The Washington Post is not listing the addresses given to police by those arrested. Police said most of them gave incorrect addresses so that their quarters would not be searched for narcotics.

The police narcotic squad and Federal agents are still armed with five warrants for others wanted in connection with the narcotics traffic.

The seven now under arrest will be arraigned today before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence.

Correction

In reporting on the roundup of alleged members of a local narcotics ring, The Washington Post yesterday identified, in a photo caption, one of the men arrested as John Hannon Levister, of 1124 12th st. nw. Although this is the address given by Levister to police, he does not live there. The Washington Post regrets the error.

3 Soldiers Hurt in Va. Auto Crash

Three Fort Belvoir soldiers were injured in nearby Virginia early yesterday when one khaki-clad driver fell asleep at the wheel and ran off the road into a parked car.

The accident happened on Route 1, about three miles south of Alexandria.

Police said the soldier-driver who dozed off was Daniel O. Shoopman. His car ran off the left side of the road and smashed into the front of a car operated by another Fort Belvoir soldier, William D. Ullman, 25.

Ullman had pulled his car off the road and parked. Shoopman suffered a possible fracture of ribs and lacerated forehead and Ullman a possible fracture of the left leg. The third soldier, William M. Dryden, a passenger in Shoopman's car, received a possible fractured left leg, a compound fracture of the right leg and facial lacerations. All were taken to the post hospital at Fort Belvoir.

Robert Dinges, 19, of Leesville, Va., suffered a compound leg fracture in a traffic accident at 1 a. m. on Route 12, 3 miles south of Leesville, Va.

Police said the car driven by Dinges struck a mailbox and then collided with a parked truck. Dinges was taken to the University of Virginia Hospital at Charlottesville, Va.

Car Speeds Off, Investigating Officer Hurt

A Second Precinct rookie, investigating a car whose lights weren't on, was painfully injured early yesterday when the driver sped off with the policeman hanging on the running board until thrown.

The driver, Robert L. Rogers, 43, a mechanic, of 1140 Oates st. ne., was chased, stopped, and held for police by a passing taxi.

By coincidence, the cab driver's name and that of the motorist are almost identical. The policeman, Pvt. Albert Palls, 32, of 1431 Massachusetts ave. nw., was thrown from the car and suffered possible fractures of the left shoulder and right knee.

Palls, who has been on the force about a year, noticed the car, lights off, stopped for a traffic signal at New York ave. and North Capitol.

But as he opened the right front door of the auto to investigate, he said, the car suddenly started. Meantime, the cab driver—Robert L. Rogers—had noticed the incident and took after Rogers.

The tackle finally stopped Rogers traveling at an estimated 55 to 60 miles an hour, at Florida ave. and O st. ne.

The 31-year-old taxi driver, who lives at 10 Quincy pl. ne., detained Rogers until police arrived.

Rogers was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon (auto), leaving the scene of an accident, driving while drunk, and operating without lights.

Park Police Sergeant Hurt As New Horse Throws Him

Park Police Sgt. Vincent W. Cleary, 42, was thrown and injured about 1 p. m. yesterday by a new, inexperienced park police horse.

Hurried to the ground adjacent to the H st. cutoff to Rock Creek parkway, Cleary was taken to Emergency Hospital, treated for contusions and bruises to the right hip, and sent to his home, 4309 Lawrence st.

The bolting Bigshot was recovered, a few minutes after the accident, on the approaches to Key Bridge.

Cleary was riding the horse, which was purchased by park police about a week ago, under the M st. bridge when traffic made it restive.

Clearance, because of low clearance, was leaning back and off balance, another park policeman said, when the horse bolted.

Cleary, who aside from World War II military service has been with the park police about 20 years, had another mishap about two months ago when, his horse carried him against a tree near Pierce Mill in Rock Creek Park.

Policeman Injured Looking for Prowler

Investigating a police call for a prowler, Police Pvt. Wayland F. Fallon, 36, of 4368 Southern ave. se., was injured late Saturday when he fell four feet from one roof to another.

Fallon was treated at Providence Hospital for a severe cut and possible fracture of the right hand, and a possible fracture of the right ankle. The roof he fell from is at 4027 South Capitol st.

Gallinger Appeals For Blood Donations

Non-emergency operations are being delayed at Gallinger Hospital because of a shortage of blood.

Supplies are down to less than 10 pints, hospital officials said yesterday in making an appeal for donors. Blood needed is type O (Rh negative).

Donors may contribute by going to the Gallinger surgical building between 8:30 a. m. and 9 p. m. today.

Fay Awaits Baltimore Report on Bribe Case

D. C. Woman Held
In $10,000 Bond in Alleged Trial 'Fix';
D. C. Doctor Involved

A Washington woman still was held by Baltimore police last night after she allegedly offered a bribe to a woman there who is a witness in an abortion case now before the grand jury in the District.

The woman held was identified as Miss Alice Galusha, 26, of 1343 Clifton st. nw., who is employed as an IBM operator in the central payroll office of Peoples Drug Stores.

United States Attorney George Morris Fay said yesterday he is expecting a report today from Baltimore police. Until he reads the report, Fay said, he will not know whether to have Miss Galusha returned here on a Federal warrant or let Baltimore authorities deal with the case.

Fay would not discuss any details of the abortion case being considered by the District grand jury other than to say it involves a Washington physician.

He confirmed, however, that he asked Baltimore police to watch a witness, a woman living in northeast Baltimore, when he learned the physician under suspicion might try to contact her. Baltimore detectives were hidden in the home of the witness when Miss Galusha arrived. They said they heard her try to argue the Baltimore woman out of appearing as a witness against the Washington doctor.

Police said when Miss Galusha was arrested she was carrying $600 in her purse. Fay's office here asked Baltimore authorities to hold her in $10,000 bond.

Three Sought In Shooting Over Traffic

Three men wanted by Montgomery County police for a traffic argument shooting affray may be the "Pimple-Faced Gang" wanted for several holdups in Washington.

Washington police said the description of the three men who shot Norman P. Watkins, 31, 1826 6th st. nw., about 4 a. m. yesterday after an argument over traffic bears close resemblance to the three men who held up the Fruit Growers Express Co. treasurer's office of $400 on the ninth floor of 1101 Vermont ave. nw., April 12.

According to police at Silver Spring, Watkins and Ralph Turner, 2244 12th st. nw., were cut off by another car while driving on Georgia ave. near East-West Highway, Silver Spring. In the ensuing argument one of the youths pulled out a pistol and shot Watkins in the thigh. Watkins was treated at Garfield Hospital, where he was taken by Turner after the shooting, and released.

Montgomery County police broadcast a lookout for the trio, two men about 25 years old, one with a pimply face and the third about 18 years old.

The trio was riding in a black Dodge sedan of about 1939 vintage with a red stripe on body and white sidewall tires.

Washington police said the descriptions are close to those of the trio who robbed the Fruit Growers Express. The same trio also is believed to have held up the headquarters of Local 102 of the Sheet Metal Workers and took $1000, and to have obtained $3700 the following day in a holdup of an Arlington County sheet metal and roofers company.

Tuberculosis Group To Meet in Arlington

The Arlington Tuberculosis Association will hold its annual meeting at 8 p. m. today in the Arlington Health Department Auditorium, 1800 N. Edison st., Arlington.

Dr. Joseph B. Stocklen, assistant professor of clinical and preventive medicine at Western Reserve School of Medicine, in Cleveland, Ohio, will speak on "The Rehabilitation of the Tuberculous."

Tickets Urged Instead of 'Over-Used' Transit Passes

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

A perforated strip of tickets is considered the "only practical" replacement for the weekly pass on Washington streetcars and buses.

This is the opinion of a District Public Utilities Commission expert as the commission prepares to resume hearings on the Capital Transit Co. fare increase Wednesday at 10 a. m. in the District Building.

The same expert, V. A. McElfresh, executive accountant and auditor for the past 10 years, however, raised serious doubts that any change in the pass is necessary.

The CTC has asked for a rate schedule of 15 cents cash, tokens at 6 for 80 cents and elimination of the 17-year-old weekly pass.

These rates were proposed to replace the present schedule of a 13-cent-cash fare, tokens at 3 for 35 cents and a $1.75 weekly pass. The current rates were the exact ones proposed by McElfresh during 1948 hearings on a Capital Transit Co. petition for fare increases.

The weekly passes may become the crux of the entire fare increase hearings. As the PUC sessions recessed three weeks ago, Chairman James H. Flanagan asked the participants, including the firm, to submit suggestions on how the pass could be retained, indicating the Commission's concern.

McElfresh said the pass problem is a thorny one. He pointed out that the pass was originally extolled as a convenient—as well as economical—way of buying transportation for the entire family.

The CTC complaint now is that passes are being "overused" to the point where riders are receiving rides at 2 and 3 cents a trip, while others are subsidizing such travel by payment of the usual cash and token fares. One witness in the early PUC sessions testified she used her $1.75 pass for 70 to 80 trips a week.

To handle this, McElfresh said the ticket method, limiting the weekly use to 20 or 25 rides—probably at a higher weekly price—would be the "only practical" method.

He discarded suggestions for separate colors for the two sexes and another for separate passes for day and night hours as impractical. The former because it contradicts the family use principle and the latter because it would result in deadline problems—when the pass was good and when not.

A recommendation that photographs of purchasers be placed on passes was ruled out as completely impractical because of the cost and the work of making them, McElfresh said.

On the other hand, McElfresh questioned whether there is a real need to drop the pass or change it. He pointed out that company figures show each pass used an average of 34-72 times a week, compared to 34-74 times in 1948. Although the company has declared such counts are incomplete, McElfresh contended the margin of error is probably the same in both computations.

Another consideration—and the $64 one for the experts—is how elimination of the pass would affect revenues, McElfresh said.

Would it reduce total patronage, encourage purchase of tokens, payment of cash fares and if so, in what quantities?

In computing which fare schedule is the best, rate-makers are faced with the problem of estimating how much yield each suggestion would bring.

In McElfresh's view, the problem of rates is secondary to that of increasing use of private autos. The number of persons using their cars in off-peak hours is steadily rising. For such persons, the auto is a convenience which they would employ even if CTC trips cost a penny, McElfresh declared.

The controlling factor there is not the comparative cost of the private and public rides, but that of availability of parking, he said.

The present limited downtown parking helps the transit company retain its off-peak hour patronage, but if pressure for expansion of parking facilities is successful, such patronage will dwindle, he predicted.

The Capital Transit Co. vice president and comptroller, J. E. Heberle, will go on the stand for cross-examination Wednesday. Yesterday a company official said the firm will stand behind its original request for fare hikes, including elimination of the weekly pass.

He reported CTC officials have held conferences on the subject but feel there "isn't any answer to the overuse." He said the declining number of persons buying weekly passes—now 88,000 a week—compared with 220,000 when it began, indicates that the cash and token travelers are helping pay for the trips of a small number of people.

The official said the perforated ticket plan would represent "merely another token rate" in that passsengers, instead of buying three or six tokens, would purchase a weekly ticket.

Vernon V. Baker, chairman of the Federation of Citizens Associations public utilities committee, said he was not certain whether abuse by a certain number of passengers is sufficient reason to warrant eliminating passes.

He pointed out that if passes are dropped, service will be slowed since operators will be forced to make change for all passengers, thus adding to the company's labor expense.

Another hearing participant, People's Counsel John O'Dea, will meet with a newly formed citizens committee against a transit fare increase Tuesday. The group is on record against any increase in fares and for the weekly pass continuation.

The Washington chapter, Americans for Democratic Action, an intervenor in the hearing, has not recommended a rate schedule as yet, but is committed to retaining the weekly pass.

TB Conference Begins Here Today

Starts Today

Mental Health Week Focuses On Children

A wider understanding of the emotional development of children will be the aim of the second annual National Mental Health Week which begins today.

Sponsored by the National Health Week Planning Committee and supported by the National Junior Chamber of Commerce, National Mental Health Week will try to push on beyond the great progress already made in recognition of mental illness in childhood.

An example of the trend toward understanding children's needs for a sound emotional life is the Alexandria Mental Hygiene Clinic. At its start in December, 1947, the clinic was staffed by a part-time psychiatrist, one psychiatric social worker, secretary, and a part-time psychologist.

Now on the staff are a full-time psychiatrist, J. Vance Alexander, psychologist, two psychiatric social workers, and a psychiatric social worker, and a psychiatric social worker, and a State fellowship. As the staff has increased, so has the number of patients, now two and a half times the original group.

Important for the clinic and the field of mental health is the ever-increasing use of the clinic by all agencies dealing with children. Referrals from schools, physicians and the juvenile court are now almost as great in number as those referred by family or friends.

Referrals from the schools are particularly important, according to Dr. Alexander, because "our schools are the most important factor affecting children outside of the home environment. It is important that teachers as well as parents recognize the beginnings of emotional instability. Mental illness, like physical illness, can be remedied better the earlier the symptoms are caught," she said.

"Most parents want to be good parents, but some of them fail because of their own childhood experiences," Dr. Alexander explains. "While no parent is completely successful or unsuccessful, some parents need assistance in finding out how to become better parents."

One of the difficulties inherent in rearing a child is the tendency of most parents to treat their children as they themselves were treated as children.

"Where the grandparents were too strict, the parents are likely to be either too strict or too lax," Dr. Alexander said. "The results may be equally bad. The main problem is that both the grandparents and the parents were overdoing it. The middle ground is the sensible way."

The effect of parental attitudes on the emotional development of children is the subject of a movie, "Preface to Life," to be shown Tuesday at 8 p. m., at the Alexandria Recreation Center, 1605 Cameron st.

Tuberculosis, the Nation's leading cause of death among communicable diseases, will be spotlighted in a four-day conference beginning here today.

On the occasion of the forty-sixth annual meeting of the National Tuberculosis Association, at Hotel Statler, more than 2000 are expected to attend the sessions.

Concurrently, the American Trudeau Society and the National Conference of Tuberculosis Secretaries will conduct their annual meetings here.

The sessions will be attended by physicians and research scientists in the tuberculosis field from all sections of the country, and by doctors, nurses and lay health workers engaged in the continuing fight against the disease in United States and its territories.

Death Rate Drops Slowly

Dr. James E. Perkins of New York, NTA managing director, pointed out yesterday that more cases of tuberculosis are being reported now than ever before, although the death rate from the disease is slowly being forced down.

"Tuberculosis presents a rather peculiar picture in the United States today," declared Dr. Perkins. "The death rate has been forced down approximately 85 percent since the NTA, then 1-year-old, first met in Washington. Yet in 1948, 11,000 more cases of the disease were reported than in the previous year."

Three D. C. Nurses Participate

Today's central activity will be a Conference on Tuberculosis Nursing, at 2 p. m., at which three registered nurses here will participate. They include: Misses Edna Brandt, Beatrice Ritter and Elizabeth Ulrich. Also participating will be Dr. Howard W. Bosworth of Los Angeles and Miss Sheila M. Dwyer, R.N., of Lockport, N. Y.

Dr. Leonard A. Scheele, surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service, is scheduled to open Tuesday afternoon's session with a discussion of the public health outlook for the next century.

The following deaths were reported yesterday by the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the District Health Department (figures in parentheses are date of death):

Samuel A. Bryson, 84, 5402 Conn. ave. (20).
Bertha E. Mobley, 78, 1213 1/2 G. st. n.e. (21).

J. G. Jalepes Dies; Retired Restaurateur

Funeral services for Jack G. Jalepes, 87, retired Washington restaurateur, will be held at 1:30 p. m. today at the Greek Orthodox Church of Saints Constantine and Helen, 8th and C sts. n.w. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mr. Jalepes fell from a ladder while repairing a garage roof behind the building at 1734 14th st. n.w. He suffered cuts to the abdomen in the accident and was taken to Garfield Hospital. Brought to his home at 7338 14th st. n.w. Monday, Mr. Jalepes was stricken with pneumonia and died at home Friday night.

A native of Sparta, Greece, Mr. Jalepes migrated to Schenectady, N. Y., in 1903, and settled in Washington in 1905.

Employed at first by the Peoples Drug Stores and later by the John H. Williams Coffee Co., he opened a wholesale candy business at 1734 14th st. n.w., beginning in 1919. He converted the business into a restaurant and later leased the restaurant upon his retirement in 1946.

Mr. Jalepes was a member of the Washington Board of Trade, AHEPA, the Greek Orthodox Churches of Sts. Constantine and St. Helen, and St. Sophia.

Survivors include his widow, Mrs. Mary G. Jalepes; two daughters, Miss Athena Jalepes, a Post-office employee, and Katherine Jalepes, a student at the University of Maryland; and a son, George Jalepes, a student at Coolidge High School.

Henry Bausili Dead at 58

Henry Bausili, 58, owner of the Ring Barber Shop, 1200 18th st. n.w., died of a heart attack while celebrating his thirty-fifth wedding anniversary Saturday night.

Death came during a party at the Shoreham Hotel. Surrounded by his immediate family, Mr. Bausili was telling a joke about a man who had died and gone to Heaven when he keeled over, his son, Henry, reported.

Among his patrons were such notables as J. Edgar Hoover, Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer, Drew Pearson, Walter Winchell, Senator Clinton P. Anderson and other members of Congress. A native of Spain, he was also popular among the Spanish speaking embassies.

Prior to opening the Ring shop two years ago, Mr. Bausili managed the Mayflower Hotel barber shop for four years. Before that he managed hotel shops in New York City's Waldorf-Astoria, Savoy-Plaza, Pennsylvania and others.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Frances Bausili of his home, 1807 Key blvd., Arlington, and a son, Henry J. Bausili, of 1703 N. Uhle st., Arlington.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 2 p. m. at Mater's Funeral Home, 1938 N. Courthouse rd., Arlington. Burial will be private.

Spring in the City

I like to walk along the street ... And watch the children play ... and listen to their laughter and ... They happy things they say ... Or take a stroll around the park ... And see them gathered there ... For games and picnics on the grass ... With never any care ... I like to look at lovers young ... Who saunter hand in hand ... To show that love is grand ... Or gaze upon the couples with ... Their buggies bright and new ... As they parade so proudly while ... Their babies smile and coo ... And I enjoy the picture of ... The folks along in age ... And try to read the gentle lines ... Upon their facial page.

In Tomorrow's Bright New World Anne Foresees Durable Slipcovers Of Nylon Fabric, Now Sadly Lacking

DEAR ANNE:

Is there any place I can have slipcovers made of nylon fabric to ensure better wear? I have had several sets made during the past few years, of various cotton weaves, and none have worn so well. Mary Gray, Arlington, Va.

Nylon slipcovers certainly sound like the answer to a homemaker's prayer—but alas, so far that prayer is unanswered by manufacturers. We quizzed several of Washington's better known decorators, as well as a large fabric wholesale house. None of these carry any nylon fabric suitable for slipcovers, nor do they offer any prospect of this boon for the immediate future.

DEAR ANNE:

Could you tell me how to remove rust and finish flat irons in black with colored designs as I have seen in a local store? These are used as door stops and for decorative purposes. G. T. G., Arlington.

Getting rid of rust is a matter of working on the iron with wire brush, steel wool, or sandpaper. Afterward, wipe off rust dust with cloth dipped in turpentine.

Paint the iron next with enamel, one or two coats. For the decorations, use oil colors. Probably you can find some stencils in an art shop. Or create your own designs from those seen on flat irons and elsewhere. One place you could glean ideas is from the Peter Hunt booklet put out by a big paint company. This sells for 25 cents at stores carrying their product. (One that has the booklet can be reached by telephone at National 1703.)

After the designs are painted on, it's a good idea to give the iron a clear flat varnish to protect the decorations and give a "finished" look.

DEAR ANNE:

I wonder if you could give me the method for painting and finishing plain wooden salad bowls. I purchased some unpainted wooden salad bowls and, using concentrated oil paint, painted a design in the bowls. I have now applied two coats of shellac, but when the bowls were used, there was a strong taste of paint in the shellac. I would like to know what I can do to eliminate this taste, or if need be, how to finish new bowls? M. A. W., Washington.

Shellac is a very unsatisfactory finish for salad bowls and, I believe, the chief offender here. The taste lingers on and on, and is further brought out if bowls are washed in warm water. If you continue to use them, tub them in cold water each time.

If you'd like to try doing them over, you can remove the shellac by soaking with alcohol and rubbing with rough cloth. Let bowls dry out and air thoroughly before refinishing.

I'd suggest using a good quality of spar varnish over the oil-painted designs next time. This product dries with a very hard surface and is waterproof and tasteless when thoroughly dry.

DEAR ANNE:

I am very anxious to use one of the new permanent starches for our summer cottages. However, if the garments are not used sufficiently to have all the starch washed out by the end of the summer, will they be in danger from starch-eating bugs such as silver fish? What precautions should be taken at the end of summer? Mrs. Einar Rayson, 802 North Wayne st., Arlington.

Since this is a plastic starch, containing no vegetable matter, it is insect-resistant. No particular precautions need be taken against them in packing the clothing away.

DEAR ANNE:

Where in Washington (or better still, in Bethesda) can one buy the South American substitute for tea called "Mate?" W. P., Bethesda.

This fragrant brew can be purchased in Washington in the food shop of a large department store (District 5300) or in a Connecticut avenue grocery which specializes in imported delicacies (Columbia 2430.)

DEAR ANNE:

Can you tell me anyone in Washington who makes shoes, keeping the last to be used again? I am in the Navy and have not been able to find any shoes to fit which will meet the requirements of closed toe and heel, smooth leather, 2-inch heel. I don't need any orthopedic features in my shoes now, but I will if I don't soon get a pair to fit. S. M., Washington.

Have you checked the firms listed as handling "health shoes" and "corrective footwear," under "Shoes" in the yellow telephone book? Some of these have shoes made for you, keeping the last to be used again, while others fit you very carefully and exactly from a wide stock of lasts.

DEAR ANNE:

Do you know of any place where I can sell some men's suits and an overcoat that belonged to my father but were never worn? I'd also like to sell some women's dresses. D. J., Washington.

There are several shops in this area that sell second-hand clothes for you on a commission basis. Location and telephone numbers of three that handle both men's and women's clothing are as follows: (1) On Wisconsin avenue in Washington, Hudson 3555; (2) in Bethesda, Wisconsin 9843; (3) in Alexandria, Alexandria 0649.

Another in Bethesda handles women's clothing and some men's apparel—tuxedos, white dinner jackets, slacks, sports jackets, covert and gabardine overcoats. (Telephone Oliver 6063.) And another in Washington handles women's, girls and boys' clothing. Telephone, Columbia 0005.

Straight on the Head, That's How to Wear Hat

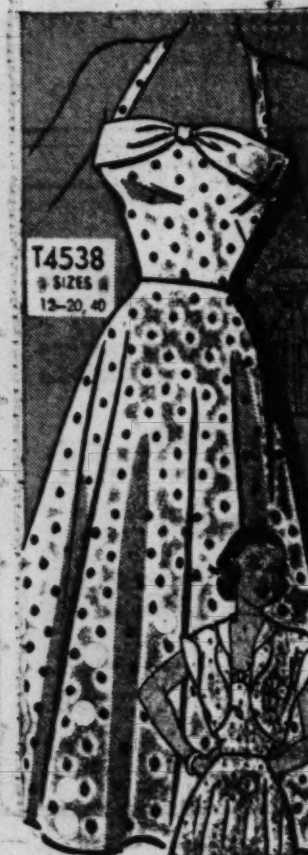

You know the craze for very short hair presents a problem to milliners—how to make hats stay on. Of course caps and deep cloches are perfect because they fit down on the head.

But we need something else too, for a different look. I've just seen the spring collections of our top hat designers and I think the new hats that sit straight on the head look very new and very smart. These may be sailors, or pill boxes or even little visor brim bonnets—but they are all worn straight and at the hair-line, so that you get a forward effect, but without a tilt.

Some are even made with tiny old fashioned velvet bandeaux that anchor the hats firmly at the hair line.

Vinsons Honored at Congressional Club; Mrs. Mesta in the Spotlight

By Marie McNair

THE Congressional Club, entertaining in honor of Chief Justice and Mrs. Fred Vinson yesterday afternoon, had another distinguished guest, Mrs. Perle Mesta, United States Minister to Luxembourg.

Greeting arrivals at the club's front door were Mrs. Harold Burton, wife of the Justice, in a springlike black and white print; Mrs. Walter F. George, Mrs. Clinton Anderson and Mrs. John D. Williams.

Upstairs, the Marine Band's scarlet coats splashed the scene with color. Red and white carnations were everywhere, but they were no match for the giant purple pansies on Roberta Vinson's bonnet. Purple orchids were pinned to her swishy black taffeta frock and a purple veil was tied under her chin.

Mrs. Hal Holmes, first vice president of the club, heading the receiving line, was hatless in a gray satin dress and a tiny sprig of lilacs tucked into her silver hair. Other officers of the club, taking the cue, also were without hats. Representative Holmes stood in the line and also in the group welcoming guests were Representative and Mrs. Lawrence B. Hays, Senator and Mrs. Olin D. Johnston, Representative and Mrs. Carl T. Curtis, Representative and Mrs. Paul T. Kilday and Representative and Mrs. Lawrence H. Smith.

Minister's Frock

Clearly Parisian

MRS. MESTA came with Mrs. Max Gardner and Mrs. Fred Morrison, the three in black with identical stoles of silver blue mink. Minister Mesta's black frock breathed Paris with its flared drapery at the side. With it she wore a large black hat with dramatic slashed brim. The brace of purple orchids on her shoulder was outshone by a triple strand of pearls, two white, one black.

I saw Mrs. Stanley Reed in navy blue suit and white daisies on a white hat, pouring tea. At the opposite end of the table was Mrs. James B. Frazier, Jr., of Tennessee, whose pale lavender straw hat was trimmed with lilacs and velvet ribbons in a deeper shade.

Mrs. Tom Clark's bright face also smiled above the silver tea service and others at the tea tables were Mrs. William M. Mc-Culloch, Mrs. Michael A. Feighan, Mrs. Joseph R. Bryson, Mrs. Sam Hobbs and Mrs. Chauncey M. Reed.

Here and there in conversational groups were Mrs. Oscar Chapman, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, introducing her husband's nephew, Bill Chapman of New York; Mrs. Albert Thomas with her young daughter, Anne; Mrs. Roy Woodruff and Senator and Mrs. Leverett Saltonstall.

Among others, members of the Federal Judiciary of the District

Mrs. J. A. Egan Is Savings Bond Drive Chairman

The appointment of Mrs. Joseph A. Egan as women's campaign chairman for the Savings Bonds Independence Drive was announced yesterday by Mrs. Lindsey P. Rawley, chairman of the women's section, D. C. Savings Bonds Division.

Mrs. Egan has been active as an associate of Mrs. Rawley in promoting Savings Bonds sales since 1942. She was booth chairman for the District during the Seventh and Victory Loans, and, since 1943, has served as a member of the Women's Executive Committee of the D. C. Savings Bonds Division. Mrs. Egan is well known for her patriotic and community service work. She is president of the Sodality Union of the Washington Archdiocese; a committee member of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, and of the Advisory Board of the National Catholic Community Service.

The Independence Drive opens May 15 and runs through July 4. Mrs. Egan has called a conference of leading women bond volunteers for 11:30 a. m. in the Projection Room of the Treasury Building.

for FAST REDUCING Results

We recommend The same methods we use to keep hundreds of Hollywood people slim and fit. NO OTHER METHOD has ever been UNDER CONTRACT to keep so many HOLLYWOOD people in trim. NO ONE ELSE CAN MAKE THIS STATEMENT. Our methods will show you results the very first visit and then every visit thereafter. NO OTHER SYSTEM HAS EVER EQUALLED OUR RECORD of RESULTS in thousands of cases from coast to coast. A record which started in Columbus, Ohio, over 20 years ago. This is the only system in the United States which became coast to coast.

A-B-C of Psychiatry

Many Physical Ailments Only Tensions

These articles are the answer to a question thousands of Americans are asking: "What is psychiatry and what does it mean to me?" George Thorman, a director of the Children's Bureau of Marion County, Ind., is a veteran reporter of scientific and medical subjects. He prepared these articles in close cooperation with the National Mental Health Foundation.

The articles are a condensation of "Toward Mental Health."

By George Thorman

CHAPTER I

The story of nervous and mental disease is a story about people you know—your neighbors, friends and relatives.

It is a story about nervous people like Fred, moody people like George, lonely people like Mary—people who have cracked under the strain of living.

More than half the patients who visit their family doctor for a physical ailment are really suffering from some type of emotional disorder.

Fred was a good mechanic. In fact, he was so good that his boss decided to promote him to foreman.

About a week before the promotion was to be made, Fred took to his bed, said there was something wrong with his leg, and insisted that he couldn't move.

X-rays were taken; general practitioners were called in. They could find nothing wrong.

What had happened to Fred? When he was to be promoted, he became anxious and fearful. He knew how to operate a lathe and was happy while he was doing it. But responsibility for supervising other men had him scared.

The psychiatrist—a doctor who had made a study of the emotions, and of the mind—diagnosed his case as hysteria, a form of neurosis (or mental upset).

"Fred's bad leg," says the psychiatrist, "was his way of solving a problem. If he had a bad leg, he couldn't be expected to go back to work and face a situation of which he was afraid."

"Fred wasn't faking. His fears actually interfered with his walking. He was firmly convinced that he couldn't use his leg. Back of this fear of the new job as foreman were other fears and conflicts which he didn't even know he had."

What Made Fred Afraid? "He felt that he ought to take the promotion. His wife, his friends, his fellow workers all expected him on the spot. How could he explain it? He couldn't say that he was afraid of the added responsibility. And yet he was."

"He was afraid because he thought he would fail. And he was afraid he would fail because of an earlier experience—one which he had almost forgotten."

"When he was 10 years old, Fred had been left to take care of his younger brother while his mother went on an errand. While she was gone, his brother ran into the street and was almost killed by an auto. When the mother came back, neighbors told her the story. She punished Fred severely and told him that never, never, would he be left to take care of his younger brother again."

"This was an unfortunate experience in Fred's life and it left its mark. It made him panic when he was faced with the supervision of others."

Over a long period of treatment, Fred was able to find the reason for his fear and overcome it with the help of the psychiatrist.

John's Indigestion. John is a bachelor. For the past 10 years he has been going to the family doctor because of nervous indigestion.

He complains of poor appetite, dizziness, pain around his heart. Yet the doctor can find nothing physically wrong with him.

It is not fair to say that John is only imagining his nervous indigestion. To him it is very real.

Count the letter in your first name. Subtract four if the number is six or more. Add three if the number is less than six. Then you have the key number. Check each key number left to right. The letters under the checks form a message.

As a matter of fact, he is sick—emotionally sick.

The real cause of John's illness is an emotional conflict which he doesn't realize. If you told him so outright, he would deny it.

He does not think of himself as emotionally "tied up." He will tell you that if he could get his stomach in good shape, he would be O. K. But here is what John looks like from the point of view of a doctor who understands emotional as well as physical ills.

John was the only child of an overly protective mother. He has turned all of his attention upon himself. Other men find an outlet for their energy in a job or a cause. But John is not interested in anything except himself. Consequently, he feels frustrated and unhappy. This frustration comes out in the form of nervous indigestion.

Closely Linked. Our minds and emotions are closely connected with our bodies. Mind and body interact.

Our bodily condition can affect our emotions, and our emotions can affect our bodies.

For example, stomach ulcers are frequently connected with worry and anxiety. The help of a psychiatrist may be necessary.

The family doctor himself, if he approaches the patient as a person rather than as a "cardiac patient" or a "stomach case," may be able to bring relief through helping the patient to an understanding of the connection between emotions and symptoms.

In such cases, helping the patient overcome his worrying is just as important to his recovery as is proper diet and medical attention.

Four out of every 10 men in World War II who were discharged from the Army for medical reasons were suffering from some nervous or mental illness.

About 60 percent of these men did not see combat service. They cracked after a few months or a few weeks of training because they were unable to adjust to the drastic changes which army life required.

Some of them had never been successful in civilian life. Others could get along well enough in their peacetime jobs and homes, but could not fit into Army life and had to be discharged.

Few of those who were discharged because of "nerves" needed hospital care. Most of them returned directly to civilian life and were able to take up their normal peacetime activities again without much difficulty.

Service organizations, mental hygiene clinics, and Veterans Administration guidance centers are helping them with their problems of readjustment.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Here's An Easy One for Puzzle Fans

It's been a while since we've had a "How old is Ann?" puzzle, so Blanche Berlin of 812 Randolph st. n.w. sends along an easy one, just to keep you in practice:

"I am four times as old as my sister, but my brother is only three times as old as my sister. My father is four times as old as I am and my mother is three years younger than my father. Our ages total 77. How old am I?"

As usual, the answer appears at the end of the column.

THIS IS WASHINGTON

A Washington correspondent for one of the Nation's leading newspapers wonders whether George Washington would understand the language being used today in the city that bears his name.

Our reporter offers as an example this conversation he overheard on a streetcar recently: "Does 608 seem to be employed as much in other cities as here?"

"We like to consider it a broad operation. Actually, I'd say it's quasi-broad."

"How about Title III?"

"Oh, that was really an outgrowth of our Swedish experience, probably never fully coordinated with factors at the local level in this country."

A little boy tugged at one man's coat sleeve and interrupted with: "Hey, Pop. Don't forget you promised to take me to see the Nats."

General Washington might have had as much trouble with the younger generation as with their elders.

FAST PACE ITEM

I have a complaint from a Silver Spring resident who charges that the Georgia ave. underpass is a "speed trap."

He says he had to post collateral in spite of the fact that the arresting officer admitted that he had not been able to "pace" the car.

"Just between you and me," confides my complainant, "I was going too fast. But if he didn't pace me, and doesn't know how fast I was going, how can he charge me with going too fast?"

Montgomery County Police (who must surely be the most polite and courteous in the world) have a ready explanation. They say that they always try to get a "pace," so that they can tell the trial magistrate exactly how fast the speeder was going.

(Note: Inasmuch as this is the 24th of the month, next meeting will be tomorrow night.)

Sometimes, however, a car is observed traveling at a high rate of speed but by the time the officer starts after it, turns around, or gets into position to pace, the offender has spotted the policeman and slowed down.

Then the charge may be "reckless driving" or driving at an "unsafe" or "unreasonable" speed. And for those charges, no "pace" is necessary.

When I asked whether trial magistrates usually accept the policeman's word in such cases, one motorcycle man grinned and said:

"Ah don't know, suh. Ah've nevuh had one go to trial. When they know they're guilty, they're usually glad to forfeit collateral and let it go at that."

CLUB NEWS

Several readers have asked me to explain the District Line Club, its purposes and requirements for eligibility.

First Jay Aitch, the District Line Association's veep, puts it like this:

"Object is to promote a spirit of neighborliness and to encourage the ambitions of members who are trying to break into print—either for love, or for money."

"Our constitution forbids us to crusade for or against anything of controversial nature."

"Our chief project is the annual publication of a book of reprints of the best items that have appeared in the District Line."

"Dues are $1 for a quarter of a year. We meet twice each month (10th and 25th) in the basement of the Petworth Library, Georgia ave. and Upshur st. n.w., and meetings begin promptly at 8 p. m."

"Anybody who has had two items printed in the column is eligible for active membership. But all readers are welcome at the meetings, whether or not they've qualified for membership. We enjoy the wisecracking and the informality of our meetings and invite all District Liners to join us at our next session."

(Note: Inasmuch as this is the 24th of the month, next meeting will be tomorrow night.)

HEARING AID

I can't explain it, and neither can the lady in question. But she insists she can't hear well unless she's wearing her glasses.

BURNT TOAST

"The fellow who burns me up," writes W. M. Devine of 234 F st. n.w., "is the guy who proposes a toast with the words, 'Here's to you, sir,' and then drinks it himself."

ANSWER TO PUZZLE

If you remembered to add Sister to your equation, you should have had no trouble. With Six as "x" it would read: 4x (1) plus 3x (Brother) plus 16x (Pop) plus 16x minus 3 (Mom) plus x (Sister) equals 77. Therefore 40x equals 77 plus 3, and x (Sister's age) equals 2. I'm 8, Brother is 6, Dad is 32 and Mom is 29.

Thus far, the puzzle is very easy. The difficult part is this: Explain how it happens that, 10 years from now, Mom will still be 29.

Missouri Tax Case Bogs Down

By Drew Pearson

One of the biggest income-tax cases in the Midwest is now on pins-and-needles, following a White House phone call.

The case is that of a Missourian, Irving Sachs, who operates "Shoe Styles" in St. Louis, and who has been recommended by the Treasury for tax-fraud prosecution. Sachs fledged on his income tax return to the tune of more than $100,000, and officials say that the fraud is clear-cut and indisputable.

When the case first arrived at the Justice Department, Justice lawyers planned to forward it as a routine matter to the United States attorney in St. Louis for criminal prosecution. But suddenly they got a phone call from the White House. The White House held up, merely that the case be held up, merely that the Justice Department confer with Sachs's newly appointed attorney, H. Schwimmer of Kansas City.

Such a conference between attorneys is not unusual. However, it is interesting that Sachs, though living in St. Louis, took the trouble to go to Kansas City to hire a new attorney. Furthermore, the attorney he retained is close to Tom Evans, Harry Truman's most intimate Kansas City friend.

Since then, the Sachs tax-fraud case has been delayed, perhaps indefinitely, on the ground that Sachs, 51, is too ill to stand trial.

Note 1. Treasury and Justice Department officials do not relish hastening the death of any evader. But it has almost got so that an old man or an invalid can violate the tax laws with impunity.

Note 2. Last January President Truman sent a message to Congress in which he took the laudable position of urging full and vigorous income-tax collection with prosecution of tax frauds. Probably he does not realize it, but telephone calls by his assistants to the Justice and Treasury Departments frequently nullify that message to Congress.

Who Said That?

Man's memory is short. It was only a few short years ago that many distinguished and conservative Americans were praising Russia as a wartime partner, and urging cooperation after the war.

See how many you can guess correctly.

1. "The world situation at the present time indicates that the hopes of civilization rest on the worthy shoulders of the courageous Russian army..." The scale and grandeur of this effort marks it as the greatest military achievement of all history.

2. "The continued cooperation between the United States and Russia is so essential to future world peace that no remaining differences can be permitted to interfere with it."

3. "We can do business with Stalin! And that business will help our political relations with the Russians."

4. "If Europe moves all the way to communism, it will not be because of Russian intervention, but because of the obstructionist tactics of die-hard reactionaries."

5. "In Russia's fight to survive as a nation lies the great hope of the world for early peace."

6. "The Russians have been consistently turning right, in the right direction..." Stalin is opposed to world revolution and was sincere in his dissolution of the Comintern."

7. "We can do business with Russia to the mutual benefit of both countries and the lasting benefit of the world."

8. And speaking of quotas, here is one by a famous Senator, that Harry Truman doesn't want him to forget. "I think it is peculiarly desirable that there be just a little dissension as possible on foreign policy between the Executive and the Congress, between the Executive and the Senate, between the Republican Party and the Democratic Party."

MIRACLE OF AMERICA

Thrives on Progress...

SEE A DRAMATIC DEMONSTRATION OF 54 YEARS OF PROGRESS
IN THE HECHT CO. F ST. AND 7TH ST. WINDOWS*

It's a sightseeing thrill! It's stopping traffic! It's a terrific barrage of 12 interest-crammed windows... In each... the Mid-Century Miracle of America come to life! See 50 years of progress right before your eyes! See the most revolutionary industrial advancement the world has ever known in a span of 5 decades. See grimy coal stoves supplanted by sleek electric ranges; knuckle-skinning washboards, by automatic home laundries. See how Grandma's rib-shattering "whalebone" became today's easy two-way stretch. See the curve-shrouding bathing suits that caught Grand-dad's roving eye. See the bungling beginnings of 20th Century living transformed into our streamlined life of today. It's America at work... thriving on progress. See it depicted in a battery of breathtaking windows in our Washington Store only... The Hecht Co.'s salute to the Miracle of America... on this... our 54th Anniversary.

THE MIRACLE OF AMERICA

See Grandma's back-breaking wash-tub of yore transformed into today's push-button home laundries!

See Great Aunt Matilda's scream-of-a-hat... contrasting sharply with modern millinery for today's "loveliest!"

See the "daring" bathing suits that set the "wolves" of the 1900's whistling... and the brief swim-suits of today!
